U.S. Navy Plane With 12 Aboard Missing In Northeastern Italy

TREVISI, Italy (AP) — An American Navy plane with 12 men aboard vanished in sullen, rain-filled skies over northern Italy as it came in to land here Friday. No sign has been seen of it since.

Italian Alpine brigades scoured the mountainous north Italian region and constant radio appeals went out to lonely villages to ask if any wreckage had been spotted. Furious rainstorms lashing northeastern Italy prevented an air search.

The plane, a twin-engine general service PV2, took off from Casablanca early Friday for the 1,400-mile hop to Treviso. Shortly after 1:30 p. m. — almost dead on schedule — the plane came into contact with Italian Air Force and asked permission to begin losing height to land. The control tower messaged all clear and normal signals were exchanged.

Thirteen minutes later, radio links with the plane suddenly cut. Milan's Air Rescue Service sent up two search planes, but they were forced to land almost at once due to bad visibility.

On Training Flight
At the Willow Grove, Pa., Naval Air Station, near Philadelphia, a spokesman identified the missing plane as one of five from the base on a two-week reservists training flight in the Mediterranean area. He said 12 men were aboard, including Comm. Robert M. Sherman, 38, of Narberth, Pa., commander of the squadron.

There were nine other reservists besides Sherman on the plane and two regular navy personnel, the spokesman said. All were listed as from the Philadelphia area and Southern New Jersey.

May Have Hit Whirlwind
Airport officials speculated the plane may have run into a whirlwind. Less than 100 miles from the plane's last reported position, a miniature tornado whipped up a 350-foot tall spout of water in Lake Garda, and similar whirlwinds were reported elsewhere.

Aurora Mayor Wins First Round Of Court Scrap

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — Mayor Paul Egan of Aurora gained the decision he sought Saturday in the first round of a court scrap he started with a left hook to the jaw of a city commissioner.

His request for a week's delay and a jury trial on assault charges were granted by Justice of the Peace John A. Krause. The magistrate continued matters to July 27.

Commissioner W. B. Robertson filed the charges against the 54-year-old mayor Thursday following a stormy city council meeting.

Egan was arrested Friday and boastfully said he caught Robertson with a punch to the jaw. "Sure I poked him," Egan said. "He started after me, and I beat him to the punch, that's all. I should really have let him have it, I guess, but you know me—I'm actually a lover rather than a fighter."

EARTHLY SERMON
WEWOKA, Okla. (AP) — The Rev. Harvey Scott of the Church of Christ was delivering a Sunday sermon when he was interrupted by a mere mundane message.

"Calling Car No. 11. Calling Car No. 11."

A check showed that a quirk caused the church public address system to pick up police calls.

U.S. Will Not Invite Zhukov To Visit Here

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Eisenhower administration has decided against inviting Soviet Marshal Georgi Zhukov to visit the United States, officials said Saturday.

President Eisenhower, in off-the-cuff remarks at his news conference Wednesday, said an exchange of visits between Zhukov and Secretary of Defense Wilson might be helpful.

Russia Closes Vladivostok Bay To Foreign Ships

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russians closed most of Vladivostok Bay Saturday to foreign ships and planes. A decision by the Council of Ministers in effect turns the bay, which bears the name of Peter the Great, into a Russian lake.

Radio Moscow announced the council has designated all waters within a line from the mouth of the Tumen — Ula River to Cape Poronny as internal waters of the Soviet Union.

That covers the confines of the bay, a triangular inlet from the Sea of Japan. The bay is roughly 115 miles wide and 55 miles long.

Foreigners were warned to stay out of all except a segment fronting on the port of Nakhodka, 50 miles southeast of Vladivostok. Shipping bulletins are to set forth the routes that must be followed to and from Nakhodka.

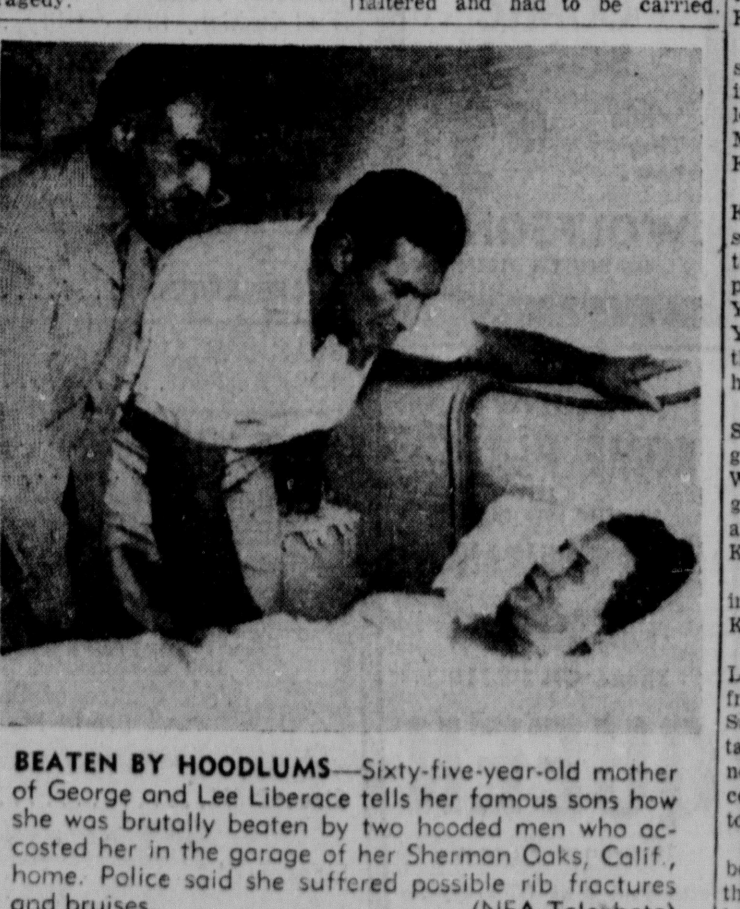

Vladivostok, a city of 325,000, lies far behind that line between Amur Bay and Golden Horn Bay, two arms of the great bay. It is the terminus of the Trans-Siberian Railway, a naval base, a base of Soviet fishing, crabs and whaling flotillas and a center of manufacturing, canning and lumber industries. Transfer point for western lend-lease supplies in World War II, it is Russia's chief Pacific port.

Western students of Soviet affairs speculated over the motive. Some diplomatic sources in Washington suggested the closing may have been aimed primarily at Japanese fishing ships. From a military viewpoint, Vladivostok may have become an important base for Pacific units of Russia's vast submarine fleet. Western naval authorities estimate Russia has 500 submarines.

PLAY ENDS IN TRAGEDY
CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Harold Fleming, 21, and his friend Clayton Moore decided while swimming in the municipal pool at nearby Marion Friday night to see who could stay under water the longest.

Fleming failed to come up. Life guards dragged him from the pool. Artificial respiration was unavailable. After an autopsy Saturday, authorities said Fleming's death was due to drowning.

Fleming's wife witnessed the tragedy.

BEATEN BY HOODLUMS—Sixty-five-year-old mother of George and Lee Liberate tells her famous sons how she was brutally beaten by two hoodlums who accosted her in the garage of her Sherman Oaks, Calif., home. Police said she suffered possible rib fractures and bruises. (NEA Telephoto)

AIR POWER FOR KOREA—Standing at attention beside their F-86 Sabre Jets are Republic of Korea pilots and crew chiefs during a ceremony at Suwon, Korea, marking the transfer of a jet training unit from the U.S. to the growing ROK Air Force. Probers Take New Aim At Hoffa: Line Up Witnesses For Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate racketeers took fresh aim at James R. Hoffa Saturday by lining up 100 witnesses for a new investigation of the Teamsters Union, in which he is a ruling figure.

This is an inquiry into Teamsters activities in the New York City area. The committee had held up the start of public hearings until after completion of Hoffa's trial on bribery and conspiracy charges lest the testimony in some way influence the court proceedings.

Chairman McClellan (D - Ark.) who helped spring the trap that led to Hoffa's arrest and indictment on the charges of which he was acquitted by a federal district court jury yesterday, said the inquiry now will get under way — and fast.

Clearly disappointed in the verdict that cleared Hoffa of charges that he bribed lawyer John C. Cheasty to spy on the committee, McClellan said Hoffa just "might" be among the witnesses in the New York hearings.

Vice Chairman Ives (R-NY), in a statement calling the verdict a "miscarriage of justice," said "Mr. Hoffa's troubles are far from ended."

Committee officials have spoken only generally of what they seek to find in the New York inquiry. They have announced the expectation to show some underworld infiltration of certain New York Teamster locals, and to show also that through Hoffa and Teamster President Dave Beck some "paper locals" — having officers but no members — were set up under strange circumstances.

French Red Leader Flies To Moscow For Conference

PARIS, (AP) — Jacques Duclos, iron-fisted Stalinist secretary of the French Communist party, flew to Moscow Saturday for conferences with Soviet boss Nikita Khrushchev.

The Duclos parley is one of a series Khrushchev has been having with European Communist leaders since he disposed of V.M. Molotov, Georgi Malenkov and Kaganovich in a Kremlin coup.

French Communist sources say Khrushchev has expressed "lively satisfaction" with the results of the talks he has held so far, especially with two top aids of Yugoslav President Tito. The Yugoslavs have made it plain they did not share this feeling, however.

The Paris newspaper France-Soir said in a dispatch from Belgrade that Poland's party chief, Wladyslaw Gomulka, and Hungarian Premier Janos Kadar were also in Moscow for talks with Khrushchev.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Budapest declined comment on Kadar's whereabouts.

The Communist newspaper L'Humanite carried a dispatch from its Moscow correspondent Saturday saying the purpose of the talks was to stress the need for noninterference by one Communist country in another's affairs and to raise living standards.

That is the line Khrushchev has been taking and which he accused the demoted party leaders of violating.

Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd made five visits to Antarctica between 1933 and 1936.

Says Laws Would Be 'Hurtful' — 'Gravely Threaten' Our Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower let Congress know Saturday he looks with strong disfavor on legislation which would kill off or drastically curb this country's status-of-forces treaties with Allied nations. These treaties and agreements provide for foreign court trial of American servicemen charged with violation of civil laws.

In a letter reply to an inquiry from Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, Republican leader in the House, Eisenhower said:

1. Passage of any such legislation would be "most hurtful," would "gravely threaten" national security, "alienate our friends" and "give comfort to those who want to destroy our way of life."

Seek Compromise On Two-Year Foreign Economic Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders talked Saturday of a possible compromise with the House under which a two-year foreign economic aid program would be authorized.

Sen. Knowland of California, the Senate Republican leader, told reporters he assumes a compromise of that sort will be suggested by senators when they meet with House members to adjust differences in the administration's foreign aid bill.

Emphasizing he was not committing himself in advance, Knowland said the suggestion had been made that a two-year program would commit only the present Congress, which runs through next year, and therefore might be acceptable to the House.

When the House passed the bill Friday night, it put a ceiling of $3,116,333,000 on foreign military and economic outlays in the year ending next June 30. The House voted to limit to one year the authority for a new development loan fund.

Previously the Senate had voted a three-year life for the loan fund. As the House passed the measure, it was 747½ million dollars below Eisenhower's requests and about 250 million dollars under the total previously approved by the Senate.

A part of this reduction was accounted for in the House vote to cut defense support outlays to 600 million dollars, despite Eisenhower's vigorous protest that such a reduction in his 900-million-dollar request was "no less than a threat to our nation's security and that of the free world."

The measure which the Senate and House now will try to compromise only authorizes foreign aid expenditures. It must be followed by an appropriation bill providing the funds for carrying out the program.

Report Business Conditions In July Spotty

NEW YORK (AP) — Business conditions in July "are not quite meeting expectations," according to a survey by the National Assn. of Purchasing Agents.

Purchasing executives queried by the NAPA found the business situation "spotty and mixed."

"Conditions are not quite meeting expectations," says the association, "and this is causing concern, despite the fact that, in the aggregate, a high level of activity is reported."

Most of the executives, the association notes, "are hopefully looking for an upswing in the second half, but not with the same degree of assurance that was expressed in the May and June reports."

Both the production and new order situations have worsened since June. Twenty-one per cent the same, and 25 per cent down. Twenty-three per cent say new orders are better, 46 the same, and 29 per cent worse.

Engineer Killed As Train Rams Into Freight

NORTH VERNON, Ind. (AP) — A Baltimore & Ohio passenger train rammed the rear of a freight train northeast of here Saturday, killing at least one person and injuring three others.

The New York-to-St. Louis passenger train struck the freight as it was pulling into a passing switch at the edge of the city.

Engineer Clarence Hamilton, 64, Seymour, Ind., was killed when the passenger diesel overturned. Fireman, T. H. Gourley, 45, Cincinnati, was trapped in the wreckage, but rescue workers were able to free him. He was taken to a hospital in serious condition.

The caboose and four or five cars of the Cincinnati-to-Louisville freight were derailed.

A railroad spokesman said it hadn't been determined yet why the freight had not made it off the main track before the passenger arrived.

2. The United States should not demand special privileges — "extraterritoriality" — by which nations where U.S. forces are stationed would surrender their right of sovereignty over offense committed in their territory.

3. This question is "no partisan political matter."

Moves to strike out or change the status-of-forces agreements were accelerated by the Supreme Court decision in the Girard case. The court ruled that the Japanese government should be permitted to try GI William S. Girard on the charge that he shot and killed a Japanese woman who was picking up empty shells on an American firing range in Japan.

Nonpartisan Aspect
Eisenhower touched upon nonpartisan aspect of the controversy in two ways:

First he referred to the legislation by its official document number—House Joint Resolution 16—without mentioning the name of its author, Republican Rep. Bow of Ohio.

Signed in 1951
Second he recalled that the original status-of-forces agreement with the North Atlantic Treaty Nations was negotiated and signed in 1951 under the previous Democratic administration; was approved by the Senate under the present administration; and that similar legislation had been rejected previously "under the strongest sort of bipartisan leadership."

In addition to Bow's proposed resolution, Rep. Burleson (D-Tex.) sought earlier this month to attach somewhat similar legislation to the foreign aid bill. This move failed.

Burleson told newsmen he thought Eisenhower was assuming the same premise that many members of the House had taken about the breaking of agreements. "No one is trying to vitiate anything," Burleson said.

CHURCHILL GIVES MISS LEIGH $1,400 IN THEATER PROJECT

LONDON (AP) — Actress Vivien Leigh has a promise of 500 pounds ($1,400) from Sir Winston Churchill to help save historic St. James's Theater. But he wrote that he doesn't approve of her campaign methods.

The former prime minister referred to a scene created in the House of Lords last week. Miss Leigh was hustled out after arising from her place among spectators and demanding that Parliament do something to save St. James's, which real estate operators plan to raze to make way for an office building.

Miss Leigh, wearing a gay, sky-blue raincoat, marched in a drizzle this morning at the head of another demonstration. Miss Leigh, her husband, Sir Laurence Olivier and hundreds of other players are demanding that the government give financial support to St. James's.

She handled the intensive questioning with poise and faltered only briefly when asked if it were true she had been married once before.

Mrs. Ennis hesitated, and then said: "I think we have all made mistakes in the past. I think we should try to live for the future and that's what I'm trying to do." Then she explained the earlier marriage.

Little Mike, Blinded To Save His Life Last July, Is 'Real Fine'

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Little Mike Sibole, the plucky youngster whose one remaining eye was removed last July to halt the spread of cancer, is getting along "real fine" in his world of darkness.

Five-year-old Mike, who captured world-wide sympathy when a surgeon had to blind him to save his life, is in top physical shape and has shown no signs of a recurrence of the cancer which claimed his vision.

His father, the Rev. James W. Sibole, who moved his family from Orlando to Miami last year so Mike could attend a school for the blind here, said his son "is as active as he's ever been."

Just a short while ago, the boy served as a ring-bearer at the wedding of one of his teachers and performed his duties in fine style.

"We're mighty proud of him," said the Rev. Sibole, who is pastor of a Baptist church here.

Mike loves to go fishing and swimming, his father said, and had a wonderful time on the family's recent vacation. Part of it was spent in the Florida Keys so the blind youngster could play in the water to his heart's content.

Mike will be enrolled in pre-school classes again this fall. He's been doing "real well" in the classroom and regrets that his sixth birthday won't come until February — too late for him to start first grade this year.

The Rev. Sibole said Mike is extremely anxious to learn braille. He already has one braille book sent him by a well-wisher and "loves to sit with it while running his fingers over the pages and pretending he's reading."

Mike, an adopted son of the Siboles, lost his right eye to cancer two years before the left was removed last year. It will be several years before Mike's chances of growing to manhood are known.

The surgeon who performed the second operation said at the time a large section of the optic nerve was removed but there was a possibility some cancer cells might have eluded the knife.

"Nothing has showed up so far," the Rev. Sibole said. "He hasn't been sick or had any recurrence."

MRS. T. R. HOWE

There is no doubt that Mrs. T. R. Howe of Lynnvile is very happy with the check she is holding. She is shown just after she received a check for $200.00 from Radio Station WLDS as her reward for identifying the Voice of Fortune. Mrs. Howe correctly identified the mystery voice as that of Mackenzie King, former Prime Minister of Canada. This is the largest prize won to date on the contest. Station officials said another contest would be started again about the middle of August.

4-H Club Activities

The Peggy Peppers 4-H club held their Achievement Day July 18 at the home of Joyce and Judy Stout. Janice Surratt called the meeting to order and welcomed the girls mother as guests.

RAINED OUT

GUYPON, Okla. (P)—Guypom held a big dedication ceremony for its new $180,000 airport, but there was one embarrassing feature—the plane carrying the dignitaries couldn't land.

Heavy rains forced a delay in completion of new runways and the party had to land at nearby Liberal, Kans., and motor to this panhandle city.

PINCH HITTER

TOLEDO, Ohio (P)—William L. Gardner, 34, of Toledo, showed up too late to take his driver's license examination recently.

When his application was given to State Highway Patrolman Meri Blay a few days later the officer didn't think he looked like the same man.

He wasn't. Questioning disclosed he was Roy L. Bryson, 41, who had agreed to take the test for Gardner, who cannot read or write.

Ironically, Bryson previously had been convicted three times for driving without a license. He couldn't pass the test either. Municipal Judge Frank W. Wiley sentenced Bryson to six months in the workhouse and fined him $200.

COP DOING STRETCH

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (P)—William B. McClaran did quite a stretch before becoming a Grand Rapids policeman.

His application was rejected on the grounds he was a quarter-inch under the minimum height. Undaunted, the 21-year-old McClaran went to a health clinic to have the vertebrae in his back stretched. He also stretched himself on a homemade "rack" and hung from an overhead beam by his hands with a thermos jug filled with nails tied to his waist. He made the height.

Old-time sailors regarded the presence of porpoises as an omen of fair winds.

Called upon to solve the annual problem of whether to adopt Daylight Saving or stick to Standard Time, the county fathers this year took a leaf from Solomon's book.

They set up a sort of "Standard Saving Time" by taking half an hour from each side.

Aug. 1 Deadline To Put Corn In Soil Bank

Charles R. Gibson, chairman of the Morgan County ASC committee, stated Saturday that Aug. 1 is the final date for farmers to dispose of excess corn acreage in order to attain price support eligibility or soil bank compliance.

All farmers who have corn acreage reserve agreements should make certain that their corn acreage is within the permitted acreage as set forth on the agreement. Failure to meet this requirement means loss of payment, plus liability for a civil penalty. Likewise, all farmers interested in price support for corn should make certain that their corn acreage is within the allotment by the Aug. 1 date.

"Most farmers who cooperated with our reporters have already received official notice of their acreages and therefore know where they stand. Should such notice have been delayed through no fault of the farmer, a limited extension of time, for disposition of excess corn, beyond the established Aug. 1 date may be granted by this office," Gibson said.

Farmers who refused to permit measurement or who indicated they were not interested in price support may still gain compliance if they adjust their acreage to the allotment by Aug. 1 and request a performance determination by posting a measurement fee. There is no extension of time beyond Aug. 1 for these farmers.

Disposition of excess corn acreage, within the time limit, may be accomplished by plowing or discing in such manner as to prevent maturity or harvest.

"Farmers who are uncertain of their status or the action to be taken should call at the ASC office immediately," Gibson declared.

SIU To Present Lincoln Story At Kelso Hollow

PETERSBURG — New Salem State Park will be the scene of what is believed to be the first production in this area of John Drinkwater's poetic drama, "Abraham Lincoln." It will be staged by the Southern Players of Southern University in the Kelso Hollow Theatre, July 24-28, Wednesday through Sunday.

Robert Cagle, head of the theatre department at Bradley University and a graduate of SIU, will portray Lincoln in this drama of Lincoln's life from his nomination for the presidency until his assassination. Pat Bahn, high school teacher at Sparta and graduate student at SIU, will appear as Mary Lincoln.

"This is an ambitious undertaking for college drama students," said Dr. Archibald McLeod, director of the play and head of the drama department at SIU. "But we have some talented performers who are enthusiastic about doing the play and are now working very hard to make this a successful venture."

Waverly Lions Study Artificial Lake Proposal

WAVERLY — The Lions Club lake committee, which for the past several years has studied the proposition of building an artificial lake south of Waverly, is in action again.

In years past, the State Department of Conservation has had engineers come to Waverly and study the proposed site. Their estimate of the situation has been that the terrain is suitable and that the cost of flooding the proposed area would be as reasonable as could be expected for a project of such proportions.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Christopher of LeMay, Mo., have had a painting made of the proposed site as it might look upon completion. This painting is now on display in the show window of the New Star Store. The Christophers are the owners of the land which formerly was the old C. S. & St. L. right of way, and which would be sold to the Lions Club as a major portion of the lake area.

Members of the committee are Gerald R. Brown, Lewis Walker, M. H. Williams, Dale Colvin, Richard E. Whalen, A. F. Ruble and Ray McCollum. Reports will be made from time to time and suggestions from the public are welcome.

Consider Bowling Alley
A proposal now under consideration by a group of Waverly citizens would, if carried to completion, convert the Rex Theatre into a modern six lane bowling alley.

The theatre and theatre building have both been for sale for some time, and, while local bowlers have expressed a desire to have an alley located in Waverly, the theatre is the first available space that would be a suitable location. The width of the theatre is adequate to allow for installation of six modern lanes, still leaving room for a walkway to the pin area, and for locker space.

A group of Waverly men, most of whom have been commuting to other communities to bowl for the past several years, held a meeting early this week to study the needs and requirements for completing this conversion. It was found that in addition to the purchase and installation of new bowling equipment and supplies, it would be necessary to build in addition at the rear of the building, plus extensive remodeling that would convert the theatre into a bowling alley.

It was also the feeling of this group, that once in operation such a business would be successful here. In past seasons eight teams have gone out of Waverly each week to bowl in other communities, as well as others who have expressed a desire to bowl regularly.

After much study, the men decided that forming a corporation and selling stock in their bowling alley throughout this area would be practicable. The above plan was successfully carried out in Pleasant Plains, operating now in a small community.

The group will have another meeting in the near future and hope to get their project underway.

Are Ireland's Males Afflicted With 'Middle Aisle Paralysis'?

WEXFORD, Ireland (P)—There is a creeping social paralysis abroad in this green and lovely land that may be called, for want of a more scientific explanation, middle aisle rickets.

It affects able-bodied males between the ages of 19 and 45 and renders them incapable of taking any kind of decisive step that might eventually lead them to the altar.

Mention of "company keeping," let alone marriage, is usually enough to send an Irishman scurrying off to the farthest available hills.

Nearly 70 per cent of Ireland's males are afflicted with this strange malady, making them the most prudent playboys in all the Western world, a nation of confirmed and contented bachelors without serious competition in modern civilization.

Ireland has the lowest marriage rate of any country in the world, and the oldest marrying age of any in Europe. Her 1946 census showed that of males in the 20-29-year-old group, only 1 in 10 is married. Even in the next 10-year age group, the figure climbs only to less than 3 in 10.

The average marrying age, for the few who do get married, is 34.9 for men and 29.1 for women. In the United States, the average man of 25 and wife of 22 already have their first child.

What have the Irish got against marriage? What has become of the thegav and romantic gooson of so many Irish songs and stories, the bold, handsome lover who poured out his heart in profuse passion for the likes of Molly Malone, the Rose of Tralee, Kathleen Mavonreen and other lovely colleens?

In a country where divorce is almost nonexistent, sex crimes exceedingly rare and the virtue of purity scrupulously practiced, there is a strong suspicion that somebody stole the wedding bell from every church from Cork to Derry.

Ireland has reason to be worried. After losing more than half her sons and daughters in a century of unparalleled emigration and cruel famine, she now is faced with the prospect of surrendering what's left of her 3½ million population to this curious brand of racial suicide.

Various explanations have been offered.

The living is too harsh. The rents too high. The pay too low. The churches too strict. The girls too sharp tongued and independent—"the bite of her tongue would shave the scales off a serpent," as I heard one village belle describe. The mothers too insistent on their sons acquiring a good dowry along with a good mate, or too domineering to allow another woman into the house. The fathers too reluctant to pass on the old homestead or parcel up their land to a married son.

And, finally, the boys too addicted to hunting, fishing, horse racing and the conviviality of the local public house; too reluctant to take on the responsibilities of raising a family in a land where famine has left its scars; and at times too demanding of a wife, seeking, as one irate spinster complained, "a fine, fat truck horse and not a wife at all."

All of these explanations hold a grain of truth. But none of them individually suffices to explain the peculiar reluctance of the Irish male to settle down.

"Other countries are just as poor, just as religious and have an equally strong family tradition," commented an old Irish priest who has to double as matchmaker in his little rural parish, with less than spectacular success. "But other countries don't have what we have—a profusion, a plague of the most cantankerous bachelors that ever walked free on the face of this earth."

What do Irish bachelors themselves think of the situation?

"I've nothing against it, mind you, and I mean to do it one of these days," said a 36-year-old garage worker. "It's just that I'm not quite ready. There's time enough, you know. No need to jump on any train that comes along and get off at the first station."

In Traymore, a beautiful resort town on the east coast, three house painters were putting the finishing touches on a summer hotel. All of them were handsome, greying, in their late 30s and unmarried.

"Well, you know," mused one, "we're a nation of track stars and the girls have a bit of a job catching us." Another said he had been going to dances with a girl, off and on, for about seven years, but he hadn't quite made up his mind yet.

The third, already possessed of a middle-age paunch and a set of ill-fitting store teeth, seemed offended by the question. "It's something we never talk about," he said. "The subject just doesn't come up. Me auld mother wouldn't hear of it anyhow."

In a Dublin pub dozens of patrons offered dozens of excuses but none came right out and said he intended to remain a bachelor forever.

It all added up to the fact that the Irish have nothing at all against marrying. Everyone you meet is talking about doing it someday, but they talk about it the way we would talk about someday getting a yacht or a summer home.

Then too, Ireland is a man's country with man's sports and man's politics and man's occupations. You seldom find a married woman working, except on the farm. Women seldom play golf, attend the hunt, flick a trout rod or enter politics. They sit on the opposite side of the church and, sometimes, on the opposite side of the dance hall. Few schools are coeducational. Most pubs do not welcome female customers.

In such a tweedy, tobacco-saturated atmosphere, untinted by even the faintest traces of perfume, the Irish bachelor thrives and slowly, ever so slowly, comes to marriagable maturity.

Even when the time for decision does arrive, he need not bother his head about selecting a mate. Quite often the family will take care of that, selecting the bride-to-be with one eye on her dowry and the other on her family background.

There is a story told of one not-so-young bachelor who complained to his father about the didn't tell me, dad," he said. "that she was lame."

"Sure now," answered the father, "you weren't planning on racing her, were you?"

LENT LENGTHENED
At first, Lent was a 36-day period of fast. By about 800 A.D., four days were added to the 36 to make it correspond to Christ's 40-day fast in the Wilderness.

Arctic Deep Freeze For Navy's Frogmen:

Men Against Ice

By JERRY BENNETT
NEA Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—(NEA)—While most people sweat out rising summer temperatures, a select group of Navy swimmers is getting paid to dive into one of the coldest pools in the world.

But there are easier ways to beat the heat than those used by Frogmen assigned to our Arctic supply fleet. And all of them are less dangerous, too.

radar warning stations along the northern Alaskan and Canadian borders.

To deliver its goods, the Navy uses ships that can pull right up onto the beach. However, many times they are blocked by solid ice packs which extend from the land and in some places to the ocean's bottom.

Vice Admiral John M. Will, Commander of the Military Sea Transportation Service, says this shore ice is like "carbon steel." The bottom and sides of any ship unlucky enough to smash against it would be ripped out.

That's where the Frogmen come in. Dressed in thin air-tight rubber suits, they explore the wall of ice below the ocean's surface. When they find a place which looks as if it could be cracked, they attach packs of waterproof explosives.

Then swimming a safe distance away through the frigid water, which in some areas drops the mercury to 29 degrees, they set off the charge. This action must be repeated until an ocean path has been blasted to the beach.

With each stroke, danger and the chance of agonizing death swim beside them. Razor sharp branches, which protrude from the ice, constantly threaten the divers. Hidden in the dark shadows below the surface, they can slash open the water-tight clothes of any man who brushes against them.

Even when wearing the hooded, rubber bathing suit, Frogmen are usually ready to head for the surface after staying in the icy water about 45 minutes. But without the

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market this week failed to pierce the ceiling represented by the historic highs of 1956 and declined on profit taking.

The ceiling is a strong one, having resisted penetration now for the third time since the bull market peak was attained in April, 1956.

The market looked all set this week to shove past the old highs. On the previous week it had set the three new peaks for 1957. The prevailing psychology in Wall Street was all in favor of such a breakthrough. That's about all the market analysts were talking about.

On Monday the market moved upward at the start into new high ground for the year. But then prices weakened. A more vigorous attempt was made on Tuesday. It was bolstered by news of record earnings for such corporate giants as Du Pont and General Electric. These and some other issues touched new highs but they couldn't hold their gain. The market as a whole ended on the downside.

The market seemed to have shot its bolt, at least temporarily on Tuesday. Volume fell off considerably in the final three days. On two of the sessions, trading was at its quietest in more than two weeks. The general course of prices was irregularly lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks declined $2.00 during the week to $186.80.

It was by no means a one-way market, as shown by the statistics. There were 487 losing stocks this week but 433 gainers. New lows for the year outnumbered new highs by only 113 to 100.

Sunshine Mining headed the most-active list on three straight days. It was boosted first by rumors and then by published news of its promising new oil and gas test well. El Paso Natural Gas dropped 5% on news of its 130 million dollars in new financing.

BEANS FEATURE
BULL MARKET

CHICAGO (AP) — It hasn't been so many years that most people have never heard of soybeans, but they're being heard from considerably on the Board of Trade these days.

Beans again featured a bull market this week with gains of 5 to 8 1/2 cents. For the last month gains in beans have totaled 21 to 22 cents.

Most other grains closed the week higher except oats, which are in the midst of the harvest season.

New style wheat closed the week 1/4 to 1/2 cents higher than last Friday. Corn was up 1/4 to 1/2, oats down 1/4 to 1/2, soybeans up 5 to 8 1/2, and hard 7 to 30 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The old reliable factors of supply and demand have been giving the bean upturn. Processor demand is strong, but the supply picture appears a little uncertain.

Due to extremely wet weather, many soybeans were planted late and the government estimated acreage at only 21,650,000 acres as of July 1.

In response to a Chicago query, the government said this included intentions to plant during July.

There is some debate over crop prospects in such big producing states as Illinois, Indiana and Ohio because of recent heavy rains and late planting, but the consensus is that damage has been checked.

An agronomist for the Illinois Crop Improvement Assn. toured Southern Illinois, Southern Indiana and Ohio and reported he never saw conditions of soybeans and corn so poor at this time of year. He said he believed much of the new bean crop in these areas might have to go into forage.

ESTIMATED RECEIPTS
CHICAGO (AP) — Unofficial estimates of livestock receipts for Monday are 21,000 cattle, 8,000 hogs and 2,000 sheep.

Student From India Dances
For Newcomers

The Welcome Wagon Newcomers club held a regular meeting in the banquet room at Hotel Dunlap Tuesday evening where a delicious fried chicken dinner was served and followed with a business meeting conducted by the president, Emma Tays.

Plans were discussed for a trip to St. Louis Aug. 24 for members and guests to see the St. Louis Muny opera.

Laura Knoy was presented with a gift for having sold the most tickets for the recently held club dance.

The large cake serving as a centerpiece was awarded to Sue Cox. After the meeting members were delightedly entertained by Miss Vinca Idnani, from India, a student at MacMurray College.

She performed several dances from her native land. Miss Idnani also answered many questions put to her by the interested members concerning the customs and living conditions in India.

Hostesses for the evening were Marian Hinderliter and Edith Guthrie.

American Navy officials in Naples said the plane, from Patrol Squadron 934, was on "a Mediterranean civilian flight," but did not elaborate.

There was no indication how many of the 12 persons aboard were servicemen and how many civilians. Names were withheld.

The plane was last observed over Padua, losing height as it approached Treviso.

ensuing demands in Congress to end all U. S. status-of-forces agreements which permit foreign governments to put American servicemen on trial for crimes under certain circumstances.

Russian propagandists seize every opportunity to press Soviet demands for withdrawal of American forces from key defense positions throughout the free world.

The Girard case, in which the American GI faces trial in Japan Aug. 26 on charges of shooting a Japanese woman as she gathered cartridge cases on a U. S. firing range, was such an opportunity.

So was the resultant clamor in Congress to end the agreement which permits such foreign trials.

Indonesia Frees
American Held
Without Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — A young American anthropologist, arrested without any official charge by Indonesian authorities, has been released and is expected home late next week.

State Department officials said Lucien Ira Zamorsky, whose 28-year-old wife lives at Moline, Ill., will take off by plane next Tuesday from Jakarta. They said he should be back in the United States by Thursday.

He was in Indonesia on a Ford Foundation fellowship.

Department officials said Zamorsky was arrested several weeks ago, but they said no formal charges or accusations ever were lodged against him.

At one point, officials said, the Indonesians complained unofficially that Zamorsky was acting suspiciously and in an illogical way for an anthropologist and linguist.

At another point, they said, Zamorsky was accused informally of practicing medicine without a license, but was permitted after that to take care of sick people who came to him.

Zamorsky's wife, Wilma, said in Moline earlier she had been told by department officials by telephone that her husband was in good health.

Sizzling Heat
Blankets U.S.,
More Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Oppressive tropical heat blanketed most of the nation Saturday. Temperatures in the 90s extended as far north as Boston and Milwaukee. Puffy winds in most sections did little to relieve the collar-wringing warmth.

Widespread afternoon thunderstorms pelted parts of Florida and the Gulf states. Thunderstorms also broke out in parts of north central Texas which has been without rain for several weeks.

An area of showers also extended northward through the Mississippi Valley and into the southern Great Lakes region.

Three to four inches of rain fell in southeastern Nebraska Friday night causing some flooding on Lincoln Creek west of Staplehurst.

Fog and overcast obscured some sections of the Pacific coast shoreline holding early afternoon temperatures in the 60s, but elsewhere in the far west generally fair and warm weather prevailed.

Another sizzler was on tap for most of the Midwest Sunday.

Propose Visit
Of Mayflower II
To Great Lakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Potter (R-Mich) asked Secretary of State Dulles Saturday for his reaction to a proposed visit of the Mayflower II to Great Lakes ports.

At the same time, Potter called trustees of the Mayflower project in London, asking for a "progress report" on the proposal made by the senator last week.

Potter had suggested that the replica of the Pilgrim ship, now in New York Harbor after sailing from England to Plymouth, Mass., visit Great Lakes ports, using the St. Lawrence Seaway.

An aide to Potter said such a visit would be made either before the ice makes navigation impossible late in November or early next spring.

In his letter to Dulles, Potter said a trip of the Mayflower II to Great Lakes ports "would serve to focus attention on the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway."

The seaway will not be open to all ocean going vessels until 1959 but it now has sufficient depth for the Mayflower II.

Under the Potter proposal the ship would stop at any lake port inviting it.

LACON, Ill. (AP) — The town constable of Lacón was shot and wounded Saturday and police sought two men they said are wanted on a murder charge in Fredrickson, Ohio.

Constable Emery Baldwin, 50, was hit with rifle fire when he approached a cottage on the Illinois River about 3 1/2 miles north of Lacón in central Illinois.

A potluck supper was served at Nichols park July 12 in his honor attended by relatives and friends.

He left Saturday for an Air Force base at Tucson, Arizona arriving the 1,750 mile distance Monday evening.

The ship had visited during a year and a half cruise. It all added up to $250 when exchanged for U. S. money.

State Marines
Criticize U.S.
In Girard Case

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois Department of the Marine Corps League, meeting here in convention, Saturday adopted a resolution criticizing the U. S. government for its action in the William Girard case.

"The constitution of the United States protects all persons in the right to be tried by his own peers, by jury and in all speed," the resolution said. "None of these protections have been observed by the United States government in the matter of Army Specialist 3-C, William S. Girard of Ottawa."

Charging Girard was "abandoned and is about to be rendered to a foreign country," the resolution called for Congress to declare "null and void all treaties with foreign countries inimical to the welfare of our people."

Another resolution adopted by the convention's more than 400 delegates asked Congress to consider converting site and facilities of the Naval Air Station at Glenview into a national cemetery available for burial of mid-west veterans.

Arthur Corcoran of Rockford was elected commandant of the department for the next year. Also elected to high posts were Peter Kates of Mount Vernon and Edward Williams of Aurora. They will serve as senior and junior vice commandants, respectively.

Count Of Dead
From Hurricane Reaches 500

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — In the still lingering horror of Hurricane Audrey the cold accounting takes place. The dead and missing: over 500. The dollar loss: over 40 million.

Sheriff Henry Reid, in his latest report on the ravaged Cameron area, said 328 bodies had been recovered and 100 persons reported missing. The missing total probably is larger. Whole families may have drowned. Transient workers may have drowned. Unless their bodies turn up, they will not be reported.

There were other deaths outside of Cameron Parish (county). At least five died elsewhere in Louisiana. Texas reported 11 deaths, including nine men who were drowned when a boat sank offshore.

The biggest money loss involved Louisiana crops. Sidney J. McCrory, Louisiana agriculture commissioner, estimated the state crop loss at 26 million dollars.

In the Cameron area, 600 buildings were destroyed by the winds and the accompanying tidal waves. Also heavily damaged were the oil well rigs in the Gulf of Mexico. Some estimates place these damages between three and five million dollars.

McCrory also placed the state livestock loss at 35,000 head, valued at more than two million dollars.

Harry Grayson's SCOREBOARD

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

GREENWOOD LAKE, N. Y.—(NEA)—A training camp, if you are a heavyweight champion of the world, is a strict, prison-like place when the fighter is doing roadwork or boxing or hitting the bags, is used to harden his body and produce automatic reactions during a fight.

The emphasis also is on having the young savage ready mentally. The more on edge a fighter gets, the better. That's the standard rule, so trainers cheat him at cards and rib him hour after hour. Or they leave him alone and let the loneliness of the place sink in and anger him.

By the time the warrior is brought to the city for the fight, he is a rock-hard, growling package of muscles that can't wait to get into the ring and take it out on somebody.

It was this way with Jack Dempsey, who had a bevy of hard-faced guys, truck driver caps pulled down over the eyes, constantly hawking him. With Rocky Marciano, there were people to do roadwork and others to rub him and some more to train him and everybody had an order the Block Buster had to carry out. In the end, it had Marciano glad to retire.

But at Long Pond Inn, where Floyd Patterson is finishing training for Hurricane Tommy Jackson at the Polo Grounds on July 29, there is none of this. There is only Patterson, quiet and casually confident. This 22-year-old kid from Brooklyn goes about his day easily and reacts sheepishly to any fuss made about him.

"I'm going on television," he reminded Dan Florio. "I don't have good clothes up here. Guess I'll drive to the city and pick some up."

Florio grunted and a few minutes later the fighter and trainer started the 50-mile drive to New York. They were back in time for a seven o'clock dinner.

This was a simple motion, but it is one you never before saw in the training camp of a heavyweight champion. Normally, the clothes would be obtained by making at least three long distance calls and finally, a day later, somebody would drive up with the wrong suit. The fighter, by no means, would be allowed to take care of it himself.

"This is the kind of kid you let do things like that all the time," says Florio. "He makes no big deal out of being champion and doesn't want anybody else to. He knows what's good or bad for him. I can go to sleep and forget about him. If you tried to steam him up for a fight, he'd think you were crazy."

Patterson's right foot comes off the floor a bit too much for a purist, and now and then Florio or Cu D'Amato, his manager, will say something about it.

"That's his way," Dan says. "He comes down flat when he has to. Why worry too much when he lifts it a little? He knocks guys stiff and he's the champion, isn't he?"

After he finishes boxing, Patterson stays at ringside and supervises the neighborhood kids who flock to him for boxing lessons. They get in the ring and he instructs.

Nobody gives Patterson the time-honored "Awright, now go get a shower and rubdown" treatment. He is left alone and finally, when he's through with the kids, he walks into the small dressing room.

For one used to the way Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis and Rocky Marciano were ordered about, Patterson's camp is a novelty.

"It is, Cu D'Amato says, "merely in keeping with the fighter's temperament. Like we say, he isn't a big deal kid. He's the heavyweight champion, but you look at him around here and you'd never know it."

To date, that has been the entire trouble with Floyd Patterson. Nobody seems to realize he is the champion.

But the way he and those about him nonchalantly went through training here, you got the idea they are cock-sure that his amazingly quick fists will leave a definite impression on everybody, Hurricane Jackson included.

21 Local Entries In Central Illinois Junior Golf Tournament

Jacksonville will again be represented at the 21st annual Central Illinois Junior Golf Tournament at Springfield July 29 through Aug. 1. Twenty-one local players will display their golfing skills at the new Lake Springfield Course, Lincoln Greens, the site of this year's State Journal meet.

The local boys are working hard preparing for the tourney under the guidance of Nichols Park pro Wood Phillips, Country Club pro Bob Shield and Jim Buckley.

Heading the local group will be Bob Bradley, who recently qualified for the National Junior tourney at Decatur. Tommy Farrell, who won the fourth flight title last year and recently defeated Western State College's top golfer in a local tourney, Joe Wells, seventh flight winner last year, will also be competing.

Most of the boys are making their third trip to the tourney, having gained valuable experience in the past two tourneys. Winner and runnerup in each regular flight will receive a trophy. Eight flights outside the championship group were needed to accommodate the 137 golfers who competed last year. Fact that a new champion and runnerup are assured means a wide open scramble for top spot. There will be a full field of top performers shooting for the honor which Larry Walden of Peoria carried off last summer.

The Jacksonville Elks Lodge will again sponsor the boys in the tournament.

Cardinals Explode For 18 Hits To Capture 9-4 Rout Over Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals, a flop on the current eastern swing, exploded for 18 hits Saturday in a 9-4 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Del Ennis' 3-run homer in the 3rd was the payoff blow, breaking a 2-2 tie. His squeeze bunt accounted for another run after Stan Musial's triple scored Al

Eddie Kasko got four of the Cardinal hits and Musial and Ken Boyer each got three. Musial's three hits boosted his major league total to 2,899.

Senators Nip Tigers, 4-3, On Sacrifice Fly

DETROIT (AP)—The last-place Washington Senators used home run power and Frank Lary's wildness to grab a 4-3 decision over the Detroit Tigers Saturday and reliever Bud Byerly blanked the Bengals over the last three innings.

Jim Lemon cracked his 13th home run with the bases empty in the first inning and Roy Sievers clouted his 22nd with a mate aboard in the sixth.

It was a sacrifice fly by pinch hitter Herb Plews that drove across the winning tally after Lary put a runner in scoring position with a pair of walks in the seventh inning.

Covington's Smash In 9th Snaps Tie, Braves Defeat New York, 7-5

NEW YORK (AP)—Wes Covington slammed a two-run homer in the ninth inning, his second of the game, as Milwaukee's patchwork Braves protected their National League lead Saturday with a 7-5 victory over the New York Giants.

Covington's shot snapped a 5-5 tie created when the Giants, shut out on three hits for seven innings, scored five unearned runs in the eighth set up by an error by Del Crandall.

Crandall, veteran catcher, was pressed into service as the starting rightfielder when handyman Andy Pafko turned up unable to play because of a bad back.

The Braves routed New York starter Ruben Gomez with three runs on four hits in the second inning, including a double by Red Schoendienst, who stretched his hitting streak to 17 games.

Crandall hit his 11th homer with none on in the third for the fourth Milwaukee run.

Johnson received credit for the fourth Milwaukee run.

Johnson received credit for the victory, his fifth against one defeat. Grissom, the loser, is 2-3.

Zernial's Homer In 9th Gives A's 6-5 Decision

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Gus Zernial's dramatic ninth inning home run off George Zuverink, Baltimore's ace relief pitcher, drove in three runs and gave the Kansas City Athletics a 6-5 victory Saturday.

The Athletics scored four times in the last inning off Connie Johnson, who apparently had his eighth pitching victory within his grasp. The tall Negro right-hander pitched no-hit ball through five innings and was sailing along on a 3-hit and a 4-2 score going into the final half innings.

Whitt, five holes down at the end of 12 holes, knocked in a hole in one and three birdies on the finishing holes of the morning round to square the match. But Finsterwald, one of the most poised of golf's new breed, held firm to win the bitterly contested afternoon struggle, three times tied on the 36th.

Hebert, 29, scored an upset 3 and a victory over former champion Walter Burkemo, the match with a birdie deuce on the 35th hole. There Hebert (pronounced a-bear) lofted his tee shot on the 170-yard hole two feet past the pin. Burkemo drove to the green 25 feet away, missed the putt and conceded.

LONDON (AP)—Tom Courtney of Fordham, Olympic 800-meter champion, splashed a half mile in 1 minute 47.7 seconds Saturday as the New York City track and field team easily defeated a London aggregation, 94-61.

Courtney's time was phenomenal. It had rained heavily before Saturday's half of the program got under way and Courtney, a power-striding runner, sput the distance over a heavy, scuffed up track that had pools of water on it at several spots.

At that, his time was the fifth fastest ever registered and goes into the book as a British all-comers record. He is seeking approval of his May clocking of 1:46.8 as a world record.

Derek Johnson of the London team, who lost to Courtney by 18 inches at Melbourne, was second again, but his time of 1:48.5 was a British national and English native record. This time Johnson, troubled by an ankle sprained at Stockholm early last week, finished five yards behind Courtney.

In the dual meet, the New York team won 13 of the 15 events. Only British victories came in the mile and two-mile run. Peter Clark, who doesn't even rank among the best in Britain, won the mile run with 4:03.5 after Brian Hewson scratched because of a leg strain.

Sprinkled throughout the two days were a host of invitational, international events which gave the Americans a chance Friday night to watch the greatest race ever run.

Derek Ibbotson of Britain smashed the world record for the mile with a 3:57.2 and the next three men all came home under four minutes. They were Ron Delaney of Ireland, and Villanova, Olympic 1500 meter winner; Stanislaus Junkwirth of Czechoslovakia, world record breaker in the 1500 meter, and Ken Wood of Britain.

Penn State's Bill Hess set a school record when he scored nine goals in lacrosse against Penn. He scored 49 goals during the 1957 season, topping his 1956 mark by eight goals.

Princeton won all eight matches to take the 1957 Eastern Intercollegiate Tennis Assn. championship.

Snider's 300th Homer Decides 7-5 Win For Dodgers Over Chicago

BROOKLYN (AP)—Duke Snider's 300th major league home run was the clincher Saturday as the Brooklyn Dodgers defeated the Chicago Cubs, 7-5, to stay one game off Milwaukee's front-running pace in the National League.

Snider's blast, his 24th of the season and eighth in 10 games since the All-Star break, touched off a two-run outburst in the eighth inning that shoved the Brooks into a 7-4 lead.

Ernie Banks' 20th homer and second of the game accounted for Chicago's final run in the ninth. Chicago 100 000 301—5 11 1

Avila's Bases-Loaded Single Sparks Tribe To 4-2 Win Over Yanks

CLEVELAND (AP)—Bobby Avila singled after Tommy Byrne had loaded the bases with walks in the eighth inning Saturday, and the two runs scored on the hit won the Cleveland Indians a 4-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

There were two out, and Chico Carrasquel was on second when Byrne gave an intentional pass to Jim Hegan then walked Early Wynn to fill the bases and set the stage for Avila's game-winning blow.

The victory was the 13th for Wynn against 10 losses and ties him with Chicago's Billy Pierce for the most games won in the American League so far. Wynn allowed the world champions only six hits and finished strong, retiring the New Yorkers 1-2-3 in the last two innings.

The defeat snapped a five-game Yankee winning string. The loss, coupled with a Chicago victory, cut the Yankees' lead over the second place White Sox to five games.

Finsterwald, L. Hebert Gain Final Round Of PGA Championship

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Dow Finsterwald, hailed by some fellow pros as the "new Ben Hogan," and longshot Lionel Hebert, who never has won a big tournament, overcame searing heat and gripping pressure Saturday to gain the final round of the PGA championship.

Finsterwald, 27, of Athens, Ohio, one of the leading money winners for the past two years, refused to be shaken by a phenomenal comeback on the part of young Don Whit and defeated the little known Alameda, Calif. pro 2 up.

He clinched with a great iron shot four feet from the pin on the final hole for a birdie three. Whit, five holes down at the end of 12 holes, knocked in a hole in one and three birdies on the finishing holes of the morning round to square the match. But Finsterwald, one of the most poised of golf's new breed, held firm to win the bitterly contested afternoon struggle, three times tied on the 36th.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Milwaukee Braves said Saturday they will ask the National League office and Commissioner Ford Frick to put centerfielder Billy Bruton on the disabled players' list.

WARREN FLOWER

GENERAL SECRETARY OF YMCA

WHEN WARREN, AND SPOUSE BARBARA, ARE NOT HOLDING CLASS FOR RED CROSS SWIMMING LESSONS, WARREN CAN BE OFT' TIMES FOUND ON THE GOLF LINKS OR ASSISTING OTHER COMMITTEE MEMBERS WITH THE "PONY-COLT" BASEBALL LEAGUE!

By STAN SPOTTS

Warren Flower, our honored guest this week in SeeBee's character illustration, didn't even suspect Charlie and I were plotting against him. In order to do the feature, we needed a picture of Warren and here's the way we got it. Since the YMCA is sponsoring the Pony and Colt League program this year, I knew Warren would never suspect us if I kept the league in mind during our telephone conversation. After calling all the water holes in town, I finally contacted Flower during one of many swimming classes, which he and his wife, Barbara, conduct for the YMCA-Red Cross program, at the Nichols Park pool every morning and evening during the week.

Since Charlie and I were elected to manage the Pony League All-Stars in the tournament at Taylorville, I merely told Warren that the Sports Editor of the Taylorville newspaper had contacted me and wanted pictures of the sponsor in charge of the League program and the managers. I didn't even give Flower a chance to spoil my plan so I told him I already had pics of SeeBee and myself and that Taylorville wanted these pictures as soon as possible for their tournament program. Warren didn't know if he had any available shots and he would look as soon as he finished his classes. He didn't have or so the note stated which he left for me Thursday night.

Friday morning, the same process, and I talked to Warren on his home phone. Only this time Warren says, "Stan, just forget it." "You already have enough pictures for Taylorville and besides it's not that important if I'm in it," Warren commented further. I said it's no bother and for him to take a sport shirt to the pool with him and I'd be over later. I took the pictures I wanted, SeeBee took it from there, and up till the time Warren opens the Sunday morning paper, he'll be thinking his picture was going to be used in a tournament program at Taylorville.

Warren's YMCA activities keep him on the go constantly. As general secretary of the "Y," Warren handles the YMCA swimming team, the J.A.A. Saturday morning basketball program and the YMCA-Red Cross swimming instructions during the summer months. Slightly hampered somewhat by the lack of a pool to call their own, Warren and Barbara have done wonders with the preps, intermediates, juniors and midgets YMCA teams in competing against member YMCA swimming teams. The YMCA uses the I.S.D. or I.B.S.-S.S. pools to conduct their practices and not many members of the various teams miss many practices although there is some distance involved.

More and more people are learning to swim (just attend the sessions at Nichols Park some mornings) and many of them will remember Warren and Barbara Flower as the ones who taught them to swim. The YMCA has come a long way since Warren took over the helm and believe me it's going a lot farther. In providing recreation for the youngsters of Jacksonville, the "Y" also provides an education in swimming, especially when the Flowers are the instructors. Warren, by the way, if you want to journey to Taylorville next Saturday afternoon with us, you're more than welcome, but I doubt if there will be any tournament programs.

17-Year-Old Wins National Junior Amateur Title

WASHINGTON (AP) — Larry Beck, a 17-year-old North Carolinian with the aplomb of a tournament veteran, Saturday routed Dave Leon of Tucson, Arizona, 6 and 5 for the National Junior amateur golf championship.

Leon, also 17, lasted just one hole before fading against Beck's 3-under par assault on Manor Country Club's wooded course.

Larry, whose father, Avery Beck, is pro at Kingston and was National Public Links runnerup 10 years ago, held right to par for the 107 holes he needed to plow through the elimination tournament.

Leon was 14 over for 106 holes. Beck breezed into the finals with a 6 and 5 morning victory over M. C. (Sonny) Methvin of Little Rock, Ark.

Seixas Rallies For Semifinal Win Over Bartzen

CHICAGO (AP)—Second-seeded Vic Seixas of Philadelphia was carried to five sets Saturday before he rallied a semifinal victory over third-seeded Bernard Bartzen of Dallas, Tex., in the National Clay Courts tennis tournament.

In 95-degree temperature, the veteran Seixas, 33, lost 20 of his first 31 games, but came back to defeat a stubborn Bartzen, 8-6, 4-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4.

The finals for the women's division were set up when Wimbledon champion Althea Gibson and Darlene Hard, seeded Nos. 1 and 2 respectively, easily won their semifinal matches.

New York's Miss Gibson, seeking her first major U. S. title, conquered Lois Felix of Meriden, Conn., 9-7, 7-2. Miss Hard of Montebello, Calif., triumphed over No. 3 seeded Karol Pagers of Miami, Fla., 6-3, 6-2.

Seixas played bareheaded the first three sets, and apparently was willing in the hot, humid weather. During the rest break after the third set, he hunted a cap and, at the start of the fourth set his game steadied remarkably. He polished off southpaw Bartzen in 16 minutes, dropping only one game.

Gonzales Defeats Segrue To Win Champions Title

FOREST HILLS, N. Y. (AP) — Pancho Gonzales won Jack Kramer's Tournament of Champions Saturday when he crushed Pancho Segrue, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4, while blister-fingered Tony Trabert was trouncing Lew Hoad, 6-4, 10-12, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Gonzales now is undefeated in four matches, while Hoad, the $125,000 bonus baby of the pro troupe, has a 2-2 mark, so Pancho collects the $2,500 top prize money. This situation also posed a king sized headache for promoter Kramer, who had hoped to have the two go through undefeated and meet for the title Sunday.

In order to break even in the venture, Kramer will need an almost full house Sunday. A crowd of about 5,000 sat in the plus-90 degrees heat of the West Side Tennis Club Saturday. That made the total attendance about 18,000 to date.

The Gonzales-Hoad match will amount to nothing more than an exhibition.

In another singles match, Frank Sedgman cut down little Ken Rosewall, 4-6, 7-5, 6-2, 6-2.

After playing like a demon in his first two matches, Hoad, always an erratic one, suddenly let down and bowed to both Rosewall and Trabert.

Alhambra 1st But Disqualified In Arlington Race

CHICAGO (AP) — Unbeaten Alhambra, after scoring an apparent easy 41 length victory, Saturday was disqualified and Leather Button moved up as winner of the $150,075 Arlington Futurity.

Eddie Arcaro, putting Alhambra ahead at the five eighths pole, brought Edw. Hooper's 2-year-old star across the wire first in 1:09 4-5, breaking the six furlong record for the event. The old mark was 1:10 1-5 set by Hasty Road in 1953 with Arcaro aboard.

The veteran jockey also had an Arlington Futurity winner in 1954 with Royal Note.

The Arlington Park crowd of 26,244 sat in tomb-like silence when the inquiry signal was flashed on the tote board. Jockey Bill Hartack, riding Claiborne Farm's Sir Ruler, charged an interference foul at the 1-16th pole against Doug Dodson who was aboard Hooper's Olymar as an entry.

After 15 minutes of studying moving pictures, the stewards allowed the claim and, under Illinois state racing regulations, disqualified Alhambra, setting him back to fourth place.

The action was automatic although Alhambra was not involved. State rules stipulate that under such claim of foul every horse entered by the same owner is disqualified.

Leather Button, with Jack Skelly up, was a supplementary entry and earned his Rockmore Farms $97,575. To his backers at the mutual windows, Leather Button paid $20.50, $9.60 and $6.40.

William S. Miller's Relim S. W. ridden by Charles Burr, returned $11.80 and $8.60 and won $25,000 for being moved from third to second place. Sir Ruler took over third place which was worth $12,000 and paid $4.60.

Alhambra, being erased from what would have been his fourth straight triumph, received a consolation prize of $6,250 for being set back to fourth place.

Alhambra was in such complete charge there was actually little to the race as he stretched his lead gradually to 4 1/2 lengths after taking it over from his stablemate Olymar at the five eighths pole.

Dick Mayer said the birdie putt he sank on the 18th green at Inverness in Toledo to tie for the National Open title was a 10-foot putt with a four-inch break. He beat Cary Middlecoff in the playoff, 72 to 70.

'WILDMAN' KELLY BAGS FEATURE TITLE

Francis 'Wildman' Kelly of Macomb claimed his first feature victory at the Morgan County Fairgrounds speedway Friday night with an easy romp after gaining the lead early in the race. It was a close struggle for 1st at the start of the eight-car event and then the battle narrowed down for 2nd position after Kelly gunned his 538 out in front to stay.

The 'Wildman' also won the second heat race and finished second in the scat race. The victory marked a long dry spell for Kelly at the Fairgrounds Speedway, who hadn't won the feature event this year due to car difficulties.

Sports Scribe Sings Swan-Song For Ebbets Field, Polo Grounds

By JOE REICHER

NEW YORK (AP)—Farewell Polo Grounds . . . goodbye Ebbets Field. Soon you will be gone but never will you be forgotten. Thanks for the memories . . . of rousing ball games, glorious victories, crushing defeats, unforgettable heroes and heroics.

The almost certain departure of the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers for points West next year means more than just the termination of a three-club major league dynasty in New York . . . more than the end of National League representation in the nation's largest city . . . more than constant-to-coast expansion of the big leagues. It means the death of two of the most famed and storied parks in the baseball world.

There have been better stadiums, more spacious, more comfortable, perhaps cleaner, and certainly easier to reach but none can match these two time-honored and venerable homes of the Giants and Dodgers when it comes to thrills, pathos, joys, sorrows, laughter, hysteria, sublime success and utter failure.

When the bulldozers begin their work of destruction for intended housing developments—they will wipe out forever the batter's box, pitcher's mound and baselines by such heroes as Bill Terry, Mel Ott, Zach Wheat, Babe Herman, Christy Mathewson, Nap Rucker, Pee Wee Reese and Willie Mays. They will demolish the dugouts and clubhouses where John McGraw and Wilbert Robinson ruled. They will tear up the bleachers where some of the most loyal fans in the country, rooted

Donovan Tosses His 2nd 1-Hitter, Chisox Turn Bosox Back, 4-0

CHICAGO (AP)—Dick Donovan pitched his second one-hitter of the year Saturday and was kept from a no-hitter by Ted Williams' line single in the fourth inning as the White Sox defeated the Boston Red Sox, 4-0.

Donovan faced only 29 men while recording his ninth victory as against three defeats and moving the White Sox to within five games of the Yankees, who lost to Cleveland He was helped along by three snappy infield double plays.

It was the second one-hitter pitched in the American League this year. In the other one, Donovan won 4-0 over Cleveland May 25. Milwaukee's Lew Burdette and hooted. But they will never obliterate the memories and the legends that were born and grew in the two parks with the shortest outfield walks in the major leagues.

Of the two parks it is difficult to tell which is more famous although the Polo Grounds outdates Ebbets Field by two years and outsets its Brooklyn facsimile, 55,000 to 32,000.

The Polo Grounds, called that because Polo had once been played on that site, was where the immortal Christy Mathewson pitched two of his three shutouts against the Philadelphia Athletics in the 1905 world series.

Ebbets Field, the home of the "Beloved Bums," where the slogan used to be "wait until next year," provided as many thrills and as much excitement as the Polo Grounds even if it waited 43 years before it produced its first world champion. It certainly provided more fun.

It has been said that the Dodger rooters are fans by instinct. Even in the dead of winter, some of the more hardy used to be seen pushing perambulators around Ebbets Field and looking longingly at the closed park, like a homing pigeon who found himself locked out at the end of his return journey. Ebbets Field is where Nap Rucker pitched his no-hitter but was deprived of a perfect game because of three errors by the same players; where Babe Herman hit a triple that resulted in a double play; where Casey Stengel gave the bird to an umpire by lifting his cap, allowing a sparrow to swoop out; where a fan leaped out of the grandstand and climbed on the back of umpire George

Christopher indicated that the offer would call for San Francisco to receive seven per cent of the gate receipts to help pay for a 10 million dollar stadium.

The West Coast mayor did not meet Horace G. Stoneham, owner and president of the Giants. However, the mayor said they had "full discussions" by telephone. Christopher has no plans to talk further with Stoneham during a two-day visit here.

Talk has been prevalent that the Giants were headed for San Francisco and the Brooklyn Dodgers for Los Angeles. Neither team is satisfied with its present stadium because of lack of parking space and other factors, and attendance has been slipping.

Stoneham has said this will be the Giants' last year at the Polo Grounds here, and that he sees no possibility of moving to another local ball park.

San Francisco has been authorized by its citizens to spend $5 million dollars for a stadium, but Christopher says it'll cost twice that.

He said he was "not contemplating any more difficulty" in reaching terms with the Giants. Odds on their moving to San Francisco next year are "rather favorable," he said.

Christopher had said earlier that the transfer of the team was contingent upon a pay-as-you-see television arrangement.

Home run—Chicago, Torgenson.

Adjustment For Scott Corn Acreage Set For August 1

WINCHESTER — Mr. Nimrod Funk, chairman of the Scott County ASC Committee, stated that August 1 is the final date for farmers to dispose of excess corn acreage in order to attain price support eligibility or soil bank compliance.

All farmers who have corn acreage reserve agreements should make certain that their corn acreage is within the permitted acreage as set forth on the agreement. Failure to meet this requirement means loss of payment plus liability for a civil penalty. Likewise, all farmers interested in price support for corn should make certain that their corn acreage is within the allotment by the August 1 date.

He stated that most farmers cooperating have already received official notice of their acreages and therefore know where they stand, but if through no fault of theirs, they have not a limited extension of time beyond this date may be granted. For those who refused to permit measurement or who indicated they were not interested in price support may still gain compliance if they adjust their acreage to the allotment by August 1 and request a performance determination by posting a measurement fee, but there is no extension of time for them.

Mr. Funk added that disposition of excess corn acreage, within the time limit, may be accomplished by plowing or discing in such manner as to prevent maturity or harvest. Farmers who are uncertain of their status or the action to be taken should call at the ASC office at once.

They'll All Be At The Morgan County Junior Fair, July 31 To Aug. 4

The county fairs, no matter how much you love them, are just pretty much warming up places for the big shows that will come on later.

During the stays at the county fairs, though, both man and beast learn a lot. A steer that fights a halter, say at the Griggsville fair before the Fourth of July, has learned much and can endure people by the time he gets to the state fair. He can chew his cud and look back at the folks who are looking at him and if he has any malice in his heart he conceals it—by state fair or international show time.

These pictures were taken at Carrollton, at the 102nd Greene county fair. The boys shown will bring their stock to Jacksonville to compete for blue ribbons and premiums at the Morgan County Junior Fair, which opens July 31 and runs through Aug. 4.

The Angus heifer at right, shown with her owner, J. W. Rhea, 17, of Waverly will be coming back home when she comes to the local fair. She was born here last year.

At that time experts estimated she weighed "around 35 pounds." Things have been going very well with her during the last 11 months and she now tilts the scales at 700 pounds—and will do better by the time you see her at the fair. Incidentally, her name is "Queen Ann R." Rhea is the president of the Waverly Hustlers 4-H club.

Pee Wee, a handsome Hampshire ewe lamb, will be at the fair this year. She won the

Roscoe, a half-ton Angus steer, will do his best to win the fat stock trophy at the local fair, and his owner, Wayne Tomhave, 16, would relish the idea. They are shown in the fourth photograph.

That apparent hump over Roscoe's rump isn't meat. It's just a tree in the background.

Fear Dangerous Threat To Illinois Soybeans Is Moving Northward

URBANA — The dangerous soybean cyst nematode has not yet been found in Illinois. But it is now known to be so close to the southern tip of the state that it may already be there, reports M. B. Linford, University of Illinois plant pathologist.

Surveys to detect any soybean cyst nematodes that may be in Illinois soybean fields are now under way and will continue until late fall.

Soybeans damaged by nematodes are yellow, stunted and low yielding. A severe attack will destroy a crop. Some infested fields in North Carolina have been so poor that farmers have not harvested them. One farmer who harvested an infested field got four bushels an acre.

Until a year ago the soybean cyst nematode was known only in the orient and in North Carolina. Last fall it was discovered in Lake county, Tennessee. Later it was found along the Mississippi river in Tennessee, Missouri, Arkansas and Kentucky. So far this infestation seems limited to delta land where soybeans are grown intensively.

A Serious Threat

This pest presents a serious threat to the number one soybean state. Plant pest control officials of the U.S. and Illinois Department of Agriculture are working together to detect possible infestations. Careful identification is necessary because Illinois soils contain cysts of at least two other species of nematodes that must not be confused with the one that attacks soybeans.

Survey crews will concentrate most of their efforts this year in southern Illinois, the area nearest to where this nematode has been found to the south and along rivers. However, other fields in the state will be checked when reports indicate possible infestation.

Possible Trouble Spots

One place where infection is most likely to occur is in fields where soybeans have been grown year after year with little or no rotation. Another likely spot is in fields often in soybeans and flooded occasionally from river overflow. Other places include fields with poor or declining yields in recent years where fertilizers have failed to give expected response, and fields with yellow color and stunted growth where the trouble is not definitely known to be caused by poor soil.

Anyone who knows of fields where the nematode might be suspected should contact his farm adviser, but should not take sam-

Top 4-H Members To Attend Camp

Four outstanding 4-H members from Morgan county will attend the state 4-H junior leadership conference at 4-H Memorial Camp near Monticello next week. They are Carolyn Becker, Alexander, Cora Bridgman and Tommy Long, Jacksonville; and David LaKamp, Chapin.

They will serve on committees assigned to carry out a program planned with the counsel of 10 delegates elected at the 1956 conference. Besides leadership training by planning and working they will have ample time for recreation, stunts, dancing, and making new friends. One of the evening features will be an international party featuring international farm youth exchanges from abroad and those from this country who have visited other lands.

Non-profit institutions offering recreational or guidance programs to children can take part in the special milk program by applying through their local county superintendent of schools.

PRICE OF FEEDER CATTLE CLIMB

Cattle feeders soon may be making decisions to buy, or not to buy, the highest priced feeder cattle since 1952. Stocker and feeder steers at 10 leading markets recently sold at around $20 a hundred pounds, which was nearly $4 more than a year ago and nearly $7 more than in mid 1953. We have to go back five years to find so high a price this late in the year.

Prices of few, if any, major farm products have swung to violently as prices of feeder cattle. Before World War II feeder cattle sold for $7 to $8 a hundred pounds. In 1951, at the peak of the latest cattle boom, the average was nearly $33.

Then the beef bubble began to collapse. The average for feeder cattle dropped to $25.50 in 1952 and then to $15 by September 1953.

The average price of feeder and stocker steers at Kansas City was $17.35 in 1953. It recovered to $18.97 in 1954, slipped a bit to $18.60 in 1955, and settled back down to $17.37 last year.

Best Since 1952

It now appears that this may be the best year for feeder cattle producers since 1952. Most areas have had more rain than in the past four or five years, and the average price of feeder cattle has moved from around $17 to around $20 in recent weeks. Of course, calves and the higher quality older cattle sell for considerably above the average price.

The rise in feeder cattle price was caused by two things: (1) Prices of fed steers have been $2 to $4 a hundred pounds higher this year than they were in 1956, and (2) ending of the drought in the central and southern great plains created a strong demand for cattle for grazing and restocking the ranges.

Average monthly prices of feeder steers (at Kansas City) have been over the $20 level for a few months in the spring every year since price ceilings were kicked off in 1946 — except last year, when the monthly average hung between $17 and $18 all year.

High And Low Trends

Prices of stocker and feeder cattle usually decline 15 to 20 percent from a spring high to a fall low. The lower grades drop more than the higher ones, and older cattle more than calves.

The supply of calves and yearlings this fall will probably be 2 to 3 per cent below last year because there were fewer calves and cows on farms Jan. 1.

The corn crop in the western part of the corn belt is more promising than it was a year ago, offsetting much poorer prospects in Indiana and southern Illinois. The next 60 days, however, will be a critical period for corn. Feed crop and pasture conditions may worsen either in the corn belt or in the range areas, or both. Such developments could trim the demand for feeder cattle.

Another possibility is that prices of fat cattle will not make their usual summer-to-fall advance. They may not be so high in August, September and October as they were a year ago. If not, farmers may be less optimistic about buying feeder cattle than they were last year.

Plan Poultry Day At U.I. July 29

URBANA — Illinois all-industry poultry day has been set for July 29 at the University of Illinois. Those interested in any phase of the poultry business will find a well-packed program covering current problems and developments.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. and sessions will get under way at 9:30 in Room 112, Gergo Hall. L. E. Card, head of the animal science department, will welcome poultrymen and set the stage for the day's program.

Topics scheduled for discussion include the pros and cons of grit for broilers; evaluating quality of protein; production control the way to poultry profits; fat tolerance of chicks; egg and egg-worrying about heart disease; how good is soybean meal; trials and tribulations of the diagnostic laboratory; 1957 poultry legislation; and the declining lay hen population in the corn belt.

Drenching

Internal parasites are one reason lambs do not reach market weight and condition by midsummer. To give your lambs a chance to keep gaining, it may be well to drench them with phenothiazine as they are weaned.

Baled or Chopped Hay?
Several trials at the Station have shown little difference in the feeding value of chopped and baled hay. Both sheep and cattle have performed equally well on either.

Maggot in Sheep

Maggot may be a problem throughout the summer. Blow flies lay eggs in wool that is wet or stained by urine, blood spots or wounds. Norris Phelps, our sheep herdsman, treats maggots by first shearing the wool from the affected area. He then applies Smear 62 or a liquid K.R.S. to kill the maggots. After thus cleaning the area, Norris applies pine tar to repel further fly attacks.

Nature and Time Help

Man can apply mineral fertilizers and expect increased crop and forage yields. Nature, given time, through her curious workings known as microbiological activity, will provide even higher yield increases. But before Nature can do this job, she must have a favorable environment in which to work. Adequate fertility is one of the necessary conditions. Since Nature needs time, it is important to fertilize completely as soon as possible.

Digging into the records we find evidence to substantiate these statements. Plots limed, phosphated and treated with potash in 1953 to equalize them with other plots treated in 1936 failed to yield as much alfalfa and grass hay as the earlier treated plots. Substitute for Good Management?

The flood of hormone treatments, antibiotics in feed and other feed additives have undoubtedly made livestock production easier but have not replaced the need for good feeding and management. The best of feed additives will not overcome the bad effects of slipshod management. They merely make it easier to do a poor job.

The Illinois Rural Safety Council predicts that one of every 17 farm persons in the U.S. will suffer a disabling injury as a result of an accident.

Recent History Of Corn: Less Land, More Bushels

Just what has been the trend in corn production in the past 30 years? It has shown a constant increase in production per acre with a continually reduced acreage. In good crop years in the early thirties, the corn yield averaged only 25 to 26 bushels per acre; since 1950 it has averaged almost exactly 40 bushels per acre nation-wide.

In the years from 1929 to 1941 not a single 3 billion bushel corn crop was harvested. In the period from 1942 through 1956, only four crops did not reach the 3 billion bushel mark, and two of them were over 2.9 billion. The record high corn production was 3.6 billion bushels in 1948 followed closely with a 3.45 billion crop in 1956.

Largest Acreage

The largest acreage harvested, 110 million acres, had been planted in 1932, in depression days, when farmers were desperately attempting to increase their income with a larger crop. The 1932 crop was slightly under 3 billion bushels, but corn became so cheap it was burned as fuel and sold for 10c to 15c per bushel. Hogs fed on this corn sold for as low as $3 per hundred.

Since 1950, corn acreage has been reduced to around 80 million, with the recent low in 1956 at 75 million. This year, the smallest acreage of all time, around 70 million acres, will be harvested. Flooding and damage in low spots could bring the acreage harvested well below that figure.

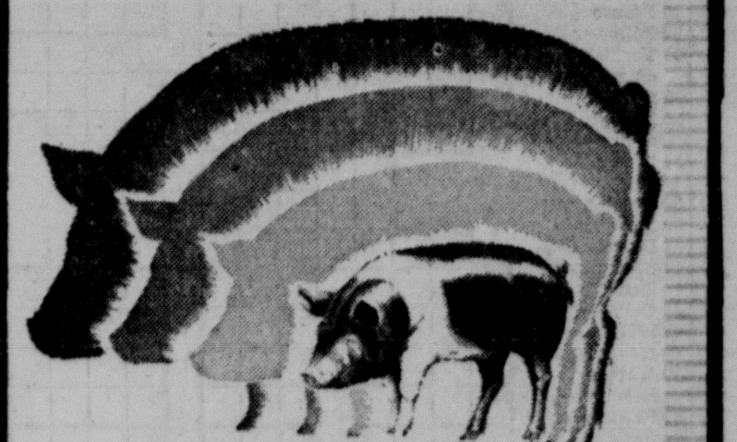

The Smallest Crops

The drought years of 1934 and 1935, when only 1.5 billion bushels was harvested. The 1934 crop was slightly the smaller of the two. Acre yields in these two years were 15 bushels in 1934 and 16 bushels in 1935. The smallest recent crop occurred in 1947 when only 2.3 billion was produced. The acre yield, however, was 23.4 bushels.

To put it in simplest arithmetical terms: in the 1930's, 100 million acres of corn at 25 bushels per acre produced crops of 2.5 billion bushels; in the 1950's, 80 million acres at 40 bushels have been producing 3.2 billion bushels.

In every case in a test with 100-pound hogs at the University of Illinois, oats in the ration slowed gains and increased the amount of feed needed to put on 100 pounds of gain.

Politicians, Note

The most remarkable thing about the International Geophysical Year just getting under way this month is that it is being undertaken at all.

The "year" actually will cover 18 months. In that time scientists of some 60 nations will give the earth the most intensive checkup it has ever had in such a time span.

They will record coordinated measurements of the earth's crust, its interior, the oceans, the atmosphere and the forces beyond the atmosphere — cosmic rays, effect of sun spots and the like.

That the world's scientists should agree to the wisdom of this study is an inevitable tribute to their insatiable curiosity, their willingness to seek again and again for fresh understanding of this well-trod planet.

For centuries men have been putting the measure to this earth, sniffing at its atmosphere, poking into its depths, climbing its heights, plumbing the oceans. No one imagines the task is complete, and of course it has been going forward steadily with the passing years.

Yet much vital measuring and discovering has long since been done, and it was quite an idea, therefore, that the scientists of many lands should cooperate in so intensive a survey as has now been launched.

Of necessity, much past measurement has been on a limited, more or less individual basis. An overall portrait of the earth and its interior has been gained by piecing together the assorted fragments.

The great virtue of the studies in the Geophysical Year is that through the fortunate collaboration of so many nations the findings will be fully and thoroughly co-ordinated. General conclusions may emerge from this study that otherwise might not come to notice for decades or longer.

One can't help wondering what would happen if politicians around the globe undertook the business of managing the world's practical affairs in the same cooperative spirit.

Paper And Air

President Eisenhower's program for greater air traffic safety, a comprehensive plan of necessity requiring gradual steps, is still a paper project in a nation whose airlines are saturated.

Meantime, the airlines and their pilots in cooperation have quietly begun to operate a new safety system in the crowded triangle of air routes from Washington to New York to Chicago and thence to Washington.

Above the level of 9,500 feet—a zone occupied by virtually all four-engine planes of the more modern types—the pilots hereafter will fly at all times by instrument flight rules. This means they will be under the constant guidance of government air traffie control centers.

The object, of course, is to minimize the prospect of mid-air collisions on the pattern of last year's disastrous Grand Canyon mishap. At that time, one plane was following instrument flight rules but the other was using so-called visual flight rules, an alternative considerably handicapped by the poor vision afforded in most of today's pilot cabins.

This voluntary move toward air safety is a signal evidence of responsibility on the part of the airlines and their pilots. Not only should it promote safer travel now, but it should encourage all advocates of the President's broad, long-range plan to press for its swift adoption.

U.S.-Canadian Committee Seeks to Reduce 'Tensions'

BY PETER EDSON

NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON (NEA)—Reduction of "tensions" between Canada and the United States is being given a different twist by a new experiment just launched here.

It calls for trying to solve existing differences between the two countries by a Canadian-American Committee of 40 prominent business, labor and farm leaders from each of the two countries. They will act as private citizens instead of through the usual government diplomatic channels.

If this effort is successful, it may set a pattern for reducing friction between countries in other parts of the free world—Latin America, Europe, the Middle East and even the Far East.

It has taken National Planning Association more than two years to get this new venture started. NPA is a privately financed, non-profit and non-political research organization interested in planning for future economic development in the U. S. and overseas. Chairman and moving spirit of NPA is Danish-born H. Christian Sonne, president of South Ridge Corp., New York.

Co-Chairman of the new Canadian-American Committee will be President Robert M. Fowler of Canadian Pulp and Paper Association and R. Douglas Stuart of Chicago, board chairman of Quaker Oat and former U. S. ambassador to Canada.

The new committee will hold its first meeting in or near Montreal some time this fall. It will be a general discussion of the principal cause of strained relations between the two countries. These include: The dumping of American farm surpluses in foreign markets which undercuts Canada's grain export sales.

Canadian-American trade balances, now running a billion dollars a year in favor of the U. S. and against Canada.

Arrangements for increased Canadian participation in equity financing for U. S. investments in Canada.

Adjustment of tolls on the St. Lawrence seaway to cover unexpectedly higher costs of construction and operation.

Joint development of the Columbia River Basin.

Export of Canadian hydroelectric power, petroleum, and natural gas to insure U. S. deliveries and firm markets.

Communications and cultural relations.

Even though many women now go bare-legged on city streets, it still is not considered correct for a woman to go bare-legged to church.

That is far too casual a style to be appropriate in a place of worship.

lations, to overcome Canadian objections to U. S. saturation in radio and magazines.

The Hope Is, says Sonne, that the new committee can find solutions for some of these problems without government participation. No recommendations will be made that are not agreed to by both Canadians and Americans.

If the committee comes up with solutions that will require government action, then recommendations will be made direct to the two governments.

"Most international problems are economic problems before they become political issues," comments ex-Ambassador Stuart. He feels that businessmen should be able to solve them without government interference.

Canada is America's best customer in the world, and vice versa. New committee Co-chairman Fowler refuses to comment on the theory of Canada's new Premier John George Diefenbaker, that 15 per cent of Canada's U. S. trade should be shifted to Great Britain.

But Mr. Fowler points out that this is a reflection of the feeling of many Canadians, that the U. S. takes Canada too much for granted. Canadian national pride resents this Canadian want to be treated as equal partners, not as satellites.

This is also the feeling in many other countries where American government aid or U. S. private industry has invested heavily.

A large part of this problem, says Mr. Sonne, will be public relations. More Americans will have to be educated on the Canadian point of view. But he does not foresee his new group becoming a mere grievance committee to hear Canadian complaints.

In Hollywood

By CHARLES MAHER
(For Bob Thomas)

HOLLYWOOD (M)—You've been warned by now, no doubt, that if you don't like Westerns you may as well have your TV picture tube converted into a sun lamp next season.

Well, fellow squinters, there may be an out.

If cowboys are your idea of nothing to watch, if shoot-'em-ups leave you bilious, if Westerns have even driven you into the Lawrence Welk fan club, don't smash your 27-inch, panoramic, aluminumized, living-image TV screen yet.

You can skip the Westerns and watch a Spanish.

The one we have in mind is "Zorro," a series about the "Robin Hood of old California," to be introduced on ABC-TV in October by Walt Disney productions.

It'll be full of frantic fencing and loaded with breakneck horse-back chases and related jazz. And the Disney men think enough of its potential to assign it a spot opposite Groucho Marx (who's on NBC Thursday nights).

A lot of vile personalities are going to get knocked off in this latest Disney effort, and at least one player is going to have a big ZZ out into his forehead by the righteous sword of Zorro—a daytime Spanish playboy who turns into a formidable do-gooder at night.

But the whole thing is aimed at the family-type audience, and the Disney people assure us the blood will be spilled in judicious quantities.

The source of the series is a fiction piece about old Los Angeles by Johnston McCulley. The book twice has been made into a movie—once in the early 20s, with Douglas Fairbanks Sr. flourishing the number one foil, and again in 1950, with Tyrone Power as head washbuckler.

To play the TV role, Disney has picked Guy Williams, a 6-foot-3, 185 pounder whose been trying to get in the act around here about five years.

Williams, now 29, played a few small roles on TV in New York city, married a Powers model, came to Hollywood in 1952 on a Universal-International contract, stayed with U-I about a year, doing very little.

Now, with any luck at all, he should be able to lick obscurity. The Zorro role is a plump plum in the adventure-mixed TV game, and the Disney men are predicting unblushingly that the series will become one of the top 10 ZZ out into his forehead by the shows on television.

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (M)—There is an almost topsy-turvy air about the Senate fight over the civil rights bill which President Eisenhower's administration backed.

And like offstage music one question hovers over all that's being done: who gets what out of the Democracy?

The administration put the heat on House Republicans last June to pass this bill intact, as the administration wanted it. They got behind it in big numbers.

The Republicans are conscious of the growing importance of Negro votes in the North. With passage of this bill, they could expect a show of political gratitude from Northern Negroes in the next elections.

And if the bill, as passed, had any real teeth in it and enabled more Southern Negroes to vote, the Republicans could expect benefits there, too.

The degree of Negro gratitude, however, may be in direct relation (1) whether the bill passes and (2) whether it has teeth.

No matter what happens the Republicans can claim that Eisenhower and Sen. Knowland of California, Republican Senate leader, led the fight for it.

But when the House-passed bill got over to the Senate, and Southern Democrats began their real fight against it, Knowland felt pressure to weaken it. Together with Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn.), he proposed a softening amendment.

And Knowland has further changes in mind, although the House went down the line to pass almost exactly the kind of bill the administration asked.

But there is a complicated situation in the Senate.

There the Republicans can hardly be called all Eisenhower Republicans. But because of the circumstances—a bill backed by Eisenhower and Knowland—those who follow Eisenhower will back some kind of bill, and so will those who like Knowland.

The Democrats, North and South, have their own problem: with Southerners against it and some, if not all, Northerners for it, the Democrats have the task of preserving some kind of party unity.

Behind the scenes Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Senate leader of the Democrats, is working to produce a compromise which Northern and Southern Democrats, and perhaps Republicans, can accept.

Johnson, whose Democrats have a majority in the Senate, is in the strange position of watching Knowland, leader of the Republican minority, put up the fight for civil rights which the Democrats had always promised.

And if the Southerners want no part of compromise, even for party unity, they face the possibility of defeat by a coalition of Republicans and Northern Democrats.

They want the whole bill killed. But this time they may figure it a victory if they can wind up with a bill that is much toned down from the kind Eisenhower requested. A weak bill would be better from their viewpoint than a tough one.

Northern Democrats who help set some kind of civil rights bill can claim some credit among Northern Negroes for their part in it.

Yet, because of the Southern opposition, Democrats as a party can hardly claim much when it was the Republicans who led the fight.

Even a watered-down bill would be a victory for the Negroes—not as much as they hoped for, but still a victory. It would be the first time in this century that a civil rights bill passed the Senate.

Even a weakened civil rights bill, if it helped more Negroes vote, would be an encouragement to them next year to put pressure on Republicans and Northern Democrats to pass a stiffer one, once the Southern wall had been broken.

People who insist on diving into strange streams should always carry a spare neck.

Maybe it's best not to play for keeps.

Typical Retired Man Worries About Money

BY BEULAH STOWE

"My wife and I are very worried about money. I will retire next January, and we will have to live on about one-third less than I am now earning."

The writer is typical of men nearing retirement. Most of them are worried about money.

"We live in an apartment," he continues. "We have a 1956 car, a bank account of over $6,000, and $4,000 in U.S. Savings Bonds. My pension and an annuity will pay me $303 a month. Is there any place we can live on this, and maybe buy a small house?"

You can live on $200 a month in almost any of the retirement areas of the nation. You won't be top man on the totem pole, but won't be low man, either.

Do it like this:

1. Go shopping for a likely town. The best way to do this is by traveling extensively over the United States. But much cheaper is a pad of paper, a stack of envelopes, and some three-cent stamps. Write to the chamber of commerce in any town you are interested in, or to the office of the governor of any state you think might become your future home, and request information. Write to friends who are living in various parts of the country. Write to the minister of whatever church you belong to and ask his advice on the potentialities his town holds for you.

2. Plan to buy. You can buy a trailer or a house for $6,000 or so in Florida, parts of California, Arizona, Arkansas, or in the Lower Rio Grande Valley in Texas. This leaves you a $4,000 nest egg, in addition to your monthly income. Be sure you choose a climate with a long growing season and a piece of property with garden space. Plan on freezing and canning some of your own food.

3. Check the details. How much would it cost to move your furniture? Are there good doctors available? Fire protection? Other people in similar circumstances? Taxes, heating costs, water, climate?

4. Reconsider. It is an adventure to move, but be sure you will still like your new home when the honeymoon is over. If at all possible, sublet your apartment while you make a temporary move for at least a year. You can't tell any sooner.

On $203 a month, though it is not a huge sum these days, you can find a retirement dream worth shopping for.

Q—"My daughter wants me to help her husband buy into an automobile dealership. It would take all I own—annuities, life insurance, the house and some stocks. She is my only child, and all I have."

A—"Don't. Write her a check for $1,000 if you can. But don't sell yourself in the service of your child. Keep your glamor, as well as your money."

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

Heroes of Israel

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

Every nation and people have their heroes. Often they are legendary figures with faint emergence into history, like King Arthur and his Round Table knights of ancient Britain.

In later arrivals on the historic scene, such as the United States and Canada, a formidable array of heroes marks four centuries. At present is accorded the heroes of Plymouth as the Mayflower. It is prepared for a permanent place on the Plymouth waterfront of today, after a prior showing in New York.

This building and sailing of Mayflower II is a laudable enterprise, but one wonders just how much it has to do with that band of 102 souls who voyaged and landed in a different way.

Only half of the original Pilgrims survived the first winter, though not one went back when they had a chance to return to the England whence they had come. No, not one went back!

Those Pilgrims were spiritual heroes, Pilgrims of faith and freedom. They were building better than they realized in this new world, but their significance was spiritual.

It is doubtful in all the present ballyhoo how much of that spiritual significance is being realized or regained.

We could do with a great, new baptism of that Pilgrim spirit, for the Plymouth Pilgrims, in contrast with the Puritans, who came a little later to Massachusetts Bay, represented a freedom and tolerance, a pure flame of independence which Puritanism lacked.

But I digress. I set out to remark upon how fortunate and blessed the Jews have been in the matter of racial, national, and religious heroes. Their heroes are enshrined in the Bible, the world's best seller in an age of best-selling books. I say "the Bible," for the heroes of Israel are not all in the Old Testament; the heroes of the New Testament were also Jews.

Outstanding was Abraham, pioneer of faith and glorified emigrant.

FEATURING VACATION CLOTHES FOR MEN

THE NAVY'S NEW TRICK IS DONE WITH MIRRORS—

Pilot's eye view. He keeps "meatball" in center of mirror.

A mirror landing system for aircraft carriers, already credited with helping to cut pilots' accidents more than one-third and saving taxpayers around $20,000,000 a year, has been officially adopted by the Navy. The Mirror Landing System, demonstrated at Patuxent River, Md., is the result of a nine-year Navy research project. MLS represents cooperative efforts of the U.S. and British Navies and American industry. The mirror adopted by the Navy was developed by Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., and is being produced in quantity. Aboard a carrier (left photo), the curved mirror (about 4x4 feet) is mounted in an automatic stabilizing frame on the port side of the ship. The frame is electronically operated to compensate for the roll of the carrier. Four bright source lights are beamed into the mirror from an aft position, forming a "meatball" of light which is reflected to the pilot of the landing aircraft. As he descends, the pilot steers the plane so the "meatball" (sketch, right) appears in the center of the conclave mirror. As long as he keeps the ball of light in the center he is assured a perfect touchdown.

"Don't laugh; we had a h— of a time filling the rest of it."

WEB OF CIRCUMSTANCE

PUEBLO, Colo. (P)—Pedro Garcia appeared before Municipal Court Magistrate Fred J. Mack on a charge of careless driving. Garcia gave this explanation: While he was driving his automobile, he saw a black widow spider weaving a web from his car's sun visor on the driver's side of the vehicle. The spider was at eyebrow level.

Pedro swung at the spider. His aim was good but not his punch. The black widow wound up in Garcia's shirt.

That's where the careless driving came in. Garcia forgot about his role at the steering wheel, set out in search of the spider. The car rammed into the rear of another vehicle, parked on the street.

Mack allowed that Garcia's action was understandable, dismissed the charge.

The Fairy's Gifts

By Minnie Huckleby Ewart

A fairy set out to find the very best little girl in Chicago. All evening she went from house to apartment clear down the Avenue.

Once she lighted, like a colorful butterfly, on Frances' window sill. She heard Frances saying,

"I just won't help with them old dishes. No, let Sally do them. You always pick on me." Frances is six and Sally is eight, and their mother has lots to do.

Fairy didn't stay but a second there. She glided on to Charles' back porch. Charles and Susie were playing out there.

"I'm going to tell on you," said Charles. Tattle - tale, tattle - tale, tattle - tale -," screamed Susie, as she stuck out her tongue.

Fairy Is Sad
Fairy fairly flew away. She was quite discouraged. There was a wee tear in her eye.

She was carrying a tiny basket. It was full of packages and was mighty heavy for a Fairy to carry. She stopped next to Jimmy's porch. She shyly peeked through a window and heard a naughty word, from little Jimmy boy, too. Fairy can't bear bad words.

Visits Betty
Poor heart-sick little fairy crossed the street and paused at Betty's door. A bit of air flung it open, so into the hall Miss Fairy slipped.

Betty's mother was just saying, "Come, dearie, let's practice for awhile."

Betty was just five, and her piano was very dear, but tremulously diffident. Fairy knew how notes mix up their sounds, and how tired a little arm gets, and a weary little girl must sit straight, you know, while she practices.

And even this dear little girl had once answered her mother when she said, "How I wanted a piano when I was a little girl!"

"I did too—before—I got it." She and her mother both laughed when Betty said it.

Fairy Hopes
The fairy stood shyly, waiting—hoping.

Tonight, when Mother said, "Let's practice now," Betty answered, "All right, Mother," and began to set up her music.

Fairy tripped nearer to—glance—that little girl.

The practicing finished, Mother said, "Time for bed; it is all of seven-thirty."

Elizabeth, singing softly, carefully put away her music.

"Putting away music is just like putting my dollie to bed," said Betty. With Mother, she lightly skipped up the stairs.

Mother fondly tucked her in after hearing her prayers, then kissed her and turned out the light. Yes, the dull night light was left softly burning. Enguished, with a light, clear view to her chin, Elizabeth soon slept.

Fairy Leaves Gift
At once Fairy stood on the edge of her pillow. There she set down her wee basket ever so quietly, and took out the littlest package you could ever imagine.

She hid it under Elizabeth's pillow. She added a second package —and a third. The now happy Fairy left by the open window.

Morning came. Elizabeth began to stir. She stretched her footies far, far to the foot of the bed to see where her toes would reach this morning.

Then, showing her arms under her pillow where they wouldn't get cold, she stretched up that way as far as she could, smiling the while through the window, to the sun, to the birds, and to the lone tree, nodding "good morning," beyond the window ledge, in the little Chicago back yard.

Surprise For Betty
Her hand touched something—"How little!"

"My goodness! Who could wrap anything so tiny?"

"Why? Here's another—and another—package."

She sat right up in bed and unties the first package ever so carefully and undid the wee speck of tissue paper that wrapped it. It contained one little box, in which was the sweetest, littlest—bitsiest—dollar, so perfect, so dainty, so darling. Elizabeth laid her carefully down so she wouldn't lose the mite, and opened package number two.

It held a chair for dolly, a miniature high-low chair. It was not as tall as a pin, no, not nearly. She set it carefully near dolly, and opened package number three. A table! Very wee, but a table for all that.

Betty Wonders
"Where shall I put such little toys?" thought little Elizabeth. As she had spoken, she heard an answer, and in the wee-est, smallest voice. Would you believe it? That wee small doll was talking.

"Put me-on-the-play-house-floor." Elizabeth laughed right out loud at the idea. Yet she climbed out of bed, slipped on her warm woolly bath-robe and slippers, picked up the little high-chair in the most assured manner in the world, and set it on the play-room floor.

Magie!

"Why—look!"

AT ONCE IT WAS AS BIG AS ALL HER OTHER DOLL FURNITURE.

"It's a fairy gift!" Betty cried. She carefully took dolly and set the too-wee-dear in the way-too-big chair, and—strange as it may sound—she fitted—

Then the tiny table was placed before Dolly. It too grew up. Dolly was ready for breakfast to be served. Betty's treble little voice called excitedly.

"Mother, Mother, come here!" Mother was truly mystified. But Elizabeth told her the whole story.

"There's a tale that, when a little child is perfectly good an entire day, fairies come and bring gifts," Elizabeth's mother said. "And always," continued mother, "when a little girl is as good as my little girl was last yesterday, there is the fairy gift of 'happiness' too."

PACIFIC'S NAME
The Pacific Ocean's first name (by a European) was Southern Sea. This is what Balboa, who discovered it, named it.

Later, Magellan, the explorer who was first to sail around the world, named it Pacific, which means peaceful.

In 1520, Magellan discovered the Straits of Magellan—named, of course, for him.

An American Every One Should Know

Harvey W. Wiley

By Walter B. Hendrickson

Today when you or your mother buy a bottle of medicine or a can of vegetables from the store, you know that they do not contain anything that would not be good for you. But this has been so for only about fifty years, only since Congress passed the Food and Drug Act in 1906 requiring that certain standards of purity be maintained by drug and food producers.

One of the persons who fought hardest for this bill was Harvey Washington Wiley, who was born in 1844 in a log cabin in southern Indiana and attended school in a log schoolhouse. From then on, however, he had the best education attainable, attending Hanover College, going to medical school in Indianapolis, then on to Harvard University and finally studying in Germany.

Dr. Wiley was a scientist, particularly interested in chemistry. He taught at Purdue University until, in 1889, he was appointed chief chemist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Here, he analyzed all kinds of food and drug products, a subject in which he had become interested while he was at Purdue. He knew that the food that was grown on American farms was good and pure, and he became very much alarmed when he found that manufacturers and processors were taking this good food and using harmful chemicals to keep it from spoiling.

Urges Pure Food Act
Dr. Wiley urged that Congress pass the Pure Food and Drug Act, and, over the protests of some manufacturers who had to find better and more healthful ways to preserve food, Congress did so.

Food and drug analysis is still carried on by the Department of Agriculture, and we have Dr. Wiley to thank for showing us another way in which we can use our government for our own welfare.

To the Department of Agriculture, and to Dr. Wiley as chief chemist, Congress gave the job of analyzing food products to see that they were pure. Dr. Wiley and his young assistants founded what was called the "Poison Squad" to prove that many of the food products were harmful to health. The Poison squad members ate some of the adulterated food, and noted how harmful it was to them.

With this evidence, Dr. Wiley was able to enforce the law. Today, because of Dr. Wiley's work, we know that our foods and drugs will not harm us.

Food and drug analysis is still carried on by the Department of Agriculture, and we have Dr. Wiley to thank for showing us another way in which we can use our government for our own welfare.

BIRD WITH EARMUFFS

By Emma Mae Leonhard

About a year ago in our bird articles you read of our "bird with the earmuffs." Then it was called "An Unusual Bird."

Since all of you readers wouldn't remember it—and we wouldn't expect you to—we want to recall it to you, the European Tree Sparrow.

We stated that the Jacksonville area, as far as we know, is the only one in the United States outside of the St. Louis area which can boast of European Tree Sparrows. Perhaps we should have said "boast of a concentration of them."

The same day on which this article was written, we chanced to be glancing over the March "Nature Notes," the very interesting journal of the Webster Groves Nature Study Society of Missouri. We found that Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Kirkpatrick had also called our European Tree Sparrow the "bird with the earmuffs." What a coincidence!

Or is it a mere coincidence? What else should such a bird be called? That white cheek with a black spot on it looks just like an ear muff.

Since this sparrow is usually found among or near our House Sparrows (Some of you call them English Sparrows), and can be lost among that common herd if you aren't alert, we want to suggest to you again to watch for the sparrow with the white ear muff. Then you have seen your exclusive European Tree Sparrow. Furthermore, this sparrow wears a chocolate brown crown or cap whereas the House Sparrow is a slate gray with a brown edge.

Bird-Brained?
On second thought, the "bird with the earmuffs" may seem dumb but may be pretty smart. Both mama and papa and all of the children wear the same kind of ear muffs; all European Tree Sparrows are dressed in the same color and ornaments.

Then their factories can turn out their ear muffs and caps more cheaply, and their clothes don't cost too much. Yet they can't have the fun of showing off fads and originally designed clothes, can they?

What is more, they wear their muffs at all seasons of the year. Of course, they are smart in keeping their ears warm in the winter and on cold blustery March days.

But why do they wear muffs in the summer? That seems dumb, doesn't it?

Maybe these same muffs shut out the warm rays of the sun and keep their owners cool in the summer. Who knows? You'll have to ask the "bird with the earmuffs" himself.

Do You Have A Snapshot Of Yourself?

If you have a snapshot or photograph of yourself, why not send it to the Junior page and tell us something about yourself. What you like to do, what you like best on the Junior page, what you are doing this summer, what pets you have—or, just anything other boys and girls would like to know about.

After your picture has been printed on the Junior page, you may call for it at the Jacksonville Journal-Courier office.

Part 4: Clarissa Finds A Way

Clarissa turned away, crestfallen, but not for long as she heard a Girl Scout say on the radio that morning that young women were urgently needed to train for air travel. She said to herself, I will not sell those beautiful stamps.

After all, didn't Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield say, "The postage stamps of a nation are a picture gallery of its glories?"

She announced to her family that she still planned to travel, and she had called the Girl Scouts and offered her services.

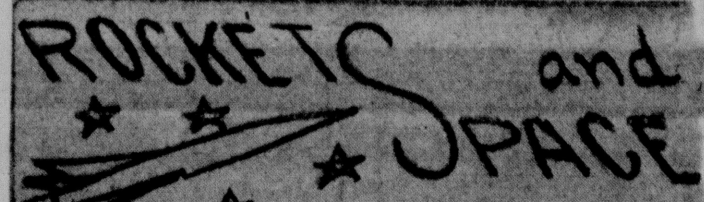

While she was telling them of her plan to join the Girl Scouts, the phone rang. She was told that they needed some one at once on a plane for a trip around the world to accompany a wealthy woman who was travelling alone in the interest of the Girl Scouts. Goodbye Clarissa!

ENGLISH ORIGIN
The guaranty against self-incrimination, embodied in the Fifth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, did not originate in the United States, but in England.

But angels have no need for calicoes, molasses, coal oil, or vinegar, so Clarissa's store remained earth bound at its corner.

Maybe, maybe, something nice would happen to her there.

EXPLORING THE MOON

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

Quite a bit of exploring of the moon and other heavenly bodies has been done already indirectly through the use of telescopes and their accessories and radar.

These instruments have told us much about the moon although we can only see one side of the satellite. It takes the same length of time for the moon to rotate on its axis as it does for it to go around the earth so it always presents the same side to us.

Soon after the first manned space station is built, a space ship will be built to circle the moon and get pictures of the other side without attempting to land. The parts of this ship will be made on the earth then flown up to the space station where they will be assembled.

No Streamlining
This space ship will have no streamlining because that will not be necessary since there is no air to be cut through at this distance from earth. The propellant tanks will be spherical because in a sphere all the surface is subjected to the same amount of pressure. Also, one can get the greatest amount of fuel for the least material in a container of this ball-shape.

The expedition around the moon will take off when the moon is in the last quarter phase so that when it reaches the moon a week later the moon will be in the new phase from earth will be lighted by the sun so that it can be seen. When the space ship reaches the moon, it will maneuver into an orbit around this body.

After it has gone around the side of the moon away from the earth, the space ship will fire its rockets just enough to leave the orbit of the moon then fall back toward earth. When it approaches close enough to the orbit of the space station, the space ship will decrease its speed to the speed of the space station and maneuver into the orbit of the space station.

Next we'll tell you about MAN LANDS ON THE MOON. If you have any questions, send them in and they will be answered in this column.

Chapter 1: MARS LANDING

The Mars ship had made its landing. Dr. Wharton peered out the window port.

"Drat that wind storm," he muttered. "How can we get out to explore when it's blowing like sixty?"

"I'm just as impatient as you are Doc," said Joe Higgins, "but I'm just as glad we're inside the ship when the wind decided to blow up a minor cyclone."

"Me too," said the other scientist in the party, Max Bottomley. "We're going to have to govern our actions pretty much according to what these wind storms do. I've started an entry log of wind conditions, wind speed, direction, and so on. They might occur somewhat regularly."

"That's good, Max," nodded Dr. Wharton. "The more records we can keep the more results we can look for. I think Jim Wells has hung a few oxygen suits outside on wires to check whether or not the sand particles blown about by the wind will clog or possibly tear small holes in them."

"If that's the case we won't be able to go too far from the ship. At least, not until we can build small shelters."

"And on that score we can give three loud cheers for Pete Riggs," came from Roy Parker as he entered the laboratory portion of the space ship. "Just imagine how much easier exploring on the moon would have been had Pete worked on his idea earlier. It still amazes me that a small cardboard box can contain all the material to make a four by four by six foot aluminium hut complete with oxygenator."

"I believe," spoke Dr. Wharton in an eager voice, "the wind is slowing down."

Max and Joe turned to the window port and Joe said, "It certainly is. I'm going to check with Jim on the oxygen suits. We've waited long enough to step out on Mars."

Joe got up from his platform seat and hurried off to the entry port where Jim Wells had just pulled in the oxygen suits.

"Hi, Joe," said Jim with a quick upward glance. "Give me a hand here. Grab one of those hand microscopes. I'll go over this suit. You take the other one."

"All right, Jim. What about the valves for clogging?"

HAPPY BIRTHDAY to Jo and Tommy!

Want To March?
If you want to march in the Birthday Parade just send in your name, address, age and birthday—2 or 3 weeks before your birthday—and we will save it until the Sunday nearest before your birthday.

If you have a party, you may tell us about that later.

Have A Picture?
Send a small photo or snapshot of yourself, and we will print that with your birthday. You may call for it after it has been printed.

FIRST NEW TESTAMENT
The first printed copy of the New Testament in English was made by William Tyndale in 1526. The New Testament is that part of the Bible that tells of Jesus' times and the years after his day.

FIRST
Julia Clifford Latta was the first woman to be placed in charge of a bureau of the U. S. federal government. President Taft, in 1912, named her the first chief of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Invents Special Bus
One of his greatest achievements was the invention of buses for wheelchairs. When the veterans from Camp Hill Hospital at Halifax were wheeled into the Walter Callow Wheel Chair Coach to be taken to the Annapolis Valley Blossom Festival at Kentville, it all seemed like a miracle to them.

One man in the party had not been out of the hospital for thirty years. Men and women and even the kiddies who are patients there are taken to the country, to the fair and other places of amusement.

And finally Walter Callow says, "Daily I talk with a procession of incapacitated men. Through my work in sending overseas cigarettes and comforts, I have become known to thousands of men overseas."

A spark of life from the still figure in the quiet room radiates far.

Boston Lancer Of 1755

Jeff Coultas, age 8, of 1033 W. State St., drew this picture of a "Boston Lancer of 1755" in his elaborate uniform with his proud horse beside him holding its head high. My, the Lancer must have been a fine sight to see in a parade!

Jeff is in grade 3 at Lafayette school. More drawings next Sunday so keep watching for yours and for those of your friends.

Two Resign From Pike County Farm Bureau

PITTSFIELD—The Pike County Farm Bureau personnel is losing two valuable members, and the city is losing two families who have been valuable citizens.

George Daigh, Jr., assistant farm adviser the past three years, has accepted a position on the Extension Staff of the University of Illinois in 4-H work, and with his wife and two children, Debbie and Stephen, will leave the middle of September to assume his new duties in Champaign.

Mr. Daigh has had charge of the 4-H work in the agriculture departments of the organizations in Pike County, and has built up a large and successful program for the young people. Mrs. Daigh has been the occupational therapist in the crippled children's clinic at Illinois hospital since its inception and many children have that the program can be continued its benefits. It is hoped used.

John Borrowman, manager of the Pike County Farm Supply Company, has accepted a position as manager of the elevator at Fairview, Ill., and with his wife and four children will leave in a few weeks to make their home there. Mr. Borrowman has been active in civic organizations and Mrs. Borrowman has been a teacher in the elementary schools of the city, a position she has also resigned.

Both families have made many friends here who regret to learn of their leaving the city.

SAD SIGHT—Flattened by recent torrential rains, this once proudly waving wheat field at Rhineland, Mo., is the object of sad scrutiny by Walter Lauer. Holding a few of the storm-shattered stalks, Lauer indicates the height of the grain before the rains came. The Missouri Farmers Association reports that this year's wheat yield has been cut in half in many sections of the state because of bad weather.

4-H Club Activities

MEREDOSIA—Wednesday afternoon the Merry Doshans 4-H Club local achievement day was the program at the Home Bureau Progressive Unit's regular meeting at the high school.

After the pledge to the flag, repeated in unison, the 4-H members modeled the garments they had made: Dianna Hammond and Rita Summers, first year; June McDaniel, Patsy Schlieker and Betty Lou Schroeder, second year; and Barbara Jeanne Lansink, fifth year. Betty Schroeder demonstrated the 4-H hem. Patsy Schlieker had arranged a display of good and bad examples of flower containers. Barbara Lansink, the president, answered questions about 4-H activities.

President Mrs. Marvin Schlieker conducted the Unit's business session while the Merry Doshans prepared refreshments. Roll call was answered by giving ways to cooperate with the 4-H club. A committee was named to help at the County Fair at noon on the Saturday the fair is in progress. Eight pies and a cake were solicited for the fair.

There will be no August meeting of the Progressive Unit. The 4-H girls served cookies, buttered cats and lemonade. The Merry Doshans taking part in the program were Dianna Hammond, Rita Summers, June McDaniel, Patsy Schlieker, Betty Schroeder, Barbara Lansink and Carol Potter. NC LIE
GEORGE, Wash. (AP)—Several hundred cherry trees have been planted here in honor of the namesake of this new and unincorporated town site. A businessman at nearby Quincy bought the site so he could make sure a town of George, Washington, was established in this area where Columbia River dam projects are bringing rapid growth.

KANIN, LOESSER AT WORK NEW YORK (AP)—Frank Loesser, famous song writer, and Garson Kanin, prominent playwright, are coordinating but not collaborating on a project that they started together.

Kanin has done the basic script. Loesser has completed most of the musical score. Now they have amicably agreed to have the tunesmith handle all the rest of the adaptation. Kanin probably still be involved with the eventual production of the untitled work—as the director.

MUSIC HALL EYES CHANGE NEW YORK (AP)—The sure-fire stage format used by Radio City Music Hall since the famous tourist attraction opened 25 years ago is being eyed for a change.

Officials are considering elimination of the ballet troupe and glee club which have featured presentations and concentrate instead on "big name" acts as box-office lures.

One Music Hall feature is to be retained—the famous Rockettes, the line of 80 girls whose precision routines have won international trophies.

ON THE JOB TRAINING DETROIT (AP)—Robert Ford, 34, of Detroit, wants to go back to prison to continue his education. Police found him sitting on the curb in front of a smashed window of a photography shop holding a camera he admitted taking from the window display. "I want to go to prison and learn a trade so I can get a job," police quoted him as saying. "I did this before in Chicago but I didn't learn enough. I need to go back to prison."

STAMPEDE AT BLUE SPRINGS

BY GENE OLSON

THE STORY: Pike Ambrose, a 17-year-old boy who works in a livery stable, is the only person in Blue Springs who wants to help Federal Marshal Barney Blanchard get a prize buck. Pike, the prize winner, was taken from a train by a mob. Pike believes the Clements brothers, Dan and Eric, led the kidnapers.

THEN it was like a dam went out. My words busted through and ran over each other. "They want to even it up for Barney, on account of what happened in the basin. Barney got killed and they say Pete did it. But it's no law case so they got to handle it."

"Dorsey told me. He was afraid to come through this town. Thought something might happen. But he wouldn't say who wanted him."

"I don't know for sure that it's Clements. That's what everybody thinks. It makes sense. The Clements said Pete got Barney killed and they didn't like Pete anyway, on account of the way he hunted buffaloes."

"And they thought this was their last chance to get him. How did you find out?"

"Some of their hunters have families in town. It's a talky town."

"Why did McNabb quit?"

"He wanted to stop it last night. Peterson and other businessmen wouldn't back him. He got mad and quit."

"Why wouldn't Peterson help?"

I pointed south along the tracks to the loading pens that stretched through town and out onto the prairie. "Those pens used to be full of cattle. This was going to be cattle country. Then come two years' drought and one year of Texas fever and the buyers quit coming from Chicago. Town like to died in its tracks."

STAMPEDE AT BLUE SPRINGS

BY GENE OLSON

Blanchard nodded. "What's that got to do with this trouble?"

"They're afraid it'll happen again. Peterson and all the rest. Buffalo hides keep this town going. The Clements and their boys do most of the hunting. You can't hunt in Buffalo Basin out south of town if the Clements don't want you to."

"People afraid the Clements will go away if they're crossed? The country's full of hide hunters."

"But not like them. The way the Clements hunt, without running the herds and without wasting, there'll be buffaloes out in the basin for a long time."

"Now, Pike, what about Cole Jethroe?"

"They say it has to wait until he gets here."

"Is he telling the Clements what to do?"

"I don't think that. Nobody does that."

Blanchard nodded. "Where's Cole coming from?"

"Chicago. He went back East a couple years ago. Before Barney was killed."

"Suppose you're wrong. Suppose they don't plan to wait for Cole."

I shrugged. "Then it's mighty late for Dorsey right now."

STAMPEDE AT BLUE SPRINGS

BY GENE OLSON

"I said, 'You could get Bill to send a message now.' Blanchard turned, slow. 'Suppose I could.'"

"I figured you wanted to. You got to, don't you?"

Blanchard stood and stretched. "Not if I get him back."

Blanchard pointed to a white tail of smoke out on the prairie. The train was going to be on time. He took out his gun and opened the gate and twirled the cylinder fast. I couldn't take my eyes away from his long fingers and the way they worked on the gun. He poked it back in the holster and the coat covered it.

"Pike, what would happen if a dozen deputy marshals rode in here with orders to clean out the town and find Dorsey?"

I thought about that. I was pretty sure what would happen. "They'd finish Dorsey fast. They don't mean to lose him now."

Blanchard nodded. "Suppose some strangers drifted in, minding their own business."

"No such thing as a stranger in Blue Springs. Not after a couple of hours."

"Maybe so. Then it's just the two of us."

THE train hit the Big Blue trestle and rumbled over, loud and hollow. The engine pumped up to us, slow, and the engineer grinned down at me and Blanchard. After the tender came two passenger cars and we could see all the folks looking out. The train halted down to a stop with the first passenger car right in front of us. A small sack flew out the back car and hit on the depot platform and slid until it hit the closed freight door.

Blanchard said, "You'd know Jethroe?"

A man got off the back car and talked to the conductor. I didn't know him but he wasn't Cole. Another man got off. I recognized Chris Eckhardt, one of the Clements' skinner. The train jerked hard, twice, and then commenced to move out.

LOOKING for a HOME?

Stop it — A home is looking for a good owner who appreciates the best in a home — it is a finished home, inside and out you watched it under construction, saw the owners creating a setting — lawn, shrubs, flowers, admired it, passed it often, and never dreamed you might ever own it.

But conditions change, it is now available. Your only question should be, when can we see it? You say when — be first.
